THE STRUGGLE IN POLITICS

BLAINE AND GOULD IN KANSAS.

PROMISING THE FREE EXPRESSION OF REPUBLICAN SENTIMENT—THE GRANT MEN NOT ALLOWED A FOOTHOLD IN THE CONVENTION—JAY GOULD'S AGENTS WORKING FOR BLAINE.

TOPEKA, KAN., April 1.—After a somewhat turbulent session, the Republican State Convention, held in this city to elect 10 delegates to Chicago, closed at 2 o'clock this morning. A test vote, showing the relative strength of the Blaine and Grant followers, was taken yesterday on the election of a temporary Chairman, and showed that the convention stood 197 for Blaine to 111 for Grant. In the Blaine caucus it was agreed that the delegates to Chicago should be chosen by the convention, instead of by the district delegations, and this agreement was carried out, despite the earnest and often angry protests of the Grant men, who commanded a majority of the delegates from two out of the three Congressional districts in the State. The delegates chosen by the convention are all Blaine men, and they are further bound to support his nomination by a resolution proclaiming him the choice of the Republicans of the State and pledging their united support. Many of the Grant delegates became disgusted with the arbitrary conduct of the majority in crowding their programme through, and withdrew before the proceedings came to a close. Later, the Grant delegates from the Second and Third Congressional Districts united and resolved to send delegates chosen by themselves to represent their districts to Chicago, but nobody supposes that delegates so chosen will be recognized by the National Convention. The supporters of Grant insist that a majority of the Republicans of the State are for the ex-President, but that the Blaine machine, engineered by Senators Ingalls and Plumb, succeeded in choosing a majority of the delegates. It is also openly and freely charged that Jay Gould's railway agents were instructed to help the Blaine cause in the election of delegates, and the result shows that the Gould railway influence was potent. Senator Plumb will lead the Kansas delegation in the Chicago Convention.

After the preliminary proceedings, as outlined above, the following resolutions were adopted:

The Republicans of Kansas, in convention assembled, declare:

I. That the true test of the faithful discharge of our duty is long-continued and uninterrupted devotion in our service to the Republic.

II. That no one who has wavered in his fealty to the Union is a safe counselor in the affairs of the nation, nor is he a person in whose hands any of the powers of government can be safely lodged for any time, however brief.

III. That under the name of Democracy are arrayed against the civilization of the age men who, having striven by rebellion and open war to destroy the nation, are now endeavoring to seize the Government by force or fraud.

IV. That we are a nation, and that the mission of the Republican Party will not be completed until under our flag every citizen, however humble, is secure in the honest expression of his opinions in all parts of our dominion, and is fully protected in his life and liberty, and in the full enjoyment of all the political rights of an American citizen.

V. That the unhappy cause of the migration of colored people from the South to the North is the apprehension of persecution and robbery by the white people, their former masters and the present owners of the soil; that it is the duty of the Government of the United States to extend to the colored people of the South such protection that their removal from their native land shall cease to be a necessity.

VI. That in the approaching Presidential campaign there will be no middle ground upon which timid patriots can stand; and those who are in favor of the perpetuity of the Union, the preservation of liberty and promotion of civilization are Republicans, and, of necessity, must vote for the success of the Republican candidates; and those who are in favor of rebellion, the spoils of war, and the ultimate destruction of republican government will vote for the success of the Democratic candidates.

VII. That James G. Blaine has the confidence of the Republicans of Kansas, and that we recognize in him a statesman worthy to lead the national Republican Party to victory; that he is the choice of the Republicans of Kansas for President of the United States, and that we pledge him our united support.

The following are the delegates elected by the convention: John R. Martin, Perry Hutchinson, George H. Case, S. Motz, O. S. Benedict, B. F. Simpson, B. W. Perkins, P. B. Plumb, H. H. Wolcott, and William Thompson.

The Third District delegates met in caucus, and elected as delegates to Chicago T. J. Anderson, of Shawnee County, and James M. Steele, of Wichita. They are both Grant men. In the Second District the same action was held, the Grant men electing T. C. Sears and S. A. Day.

NEBRASKA DEMOCRATS.

CHOOSING DELEGATES FAVORABLE TO TILDEN'S NOMINATION.

COLUMBUS, Neb., April 1.—The Democratic State Convention was called to order at 7:30 o'clock last evening in the Opera-house by S. H. Calhoun, of Otoe, Chairman of the State Central Committee. All the counties in the State were represented with the exception of Webster, Valley, Sioux, Redwillow, Polk, Phelps, Nance, Hitchcock, Hayes, and Gosper. Frank P. Ireland, of Otoe, and R. T. Beatley, of Adams, were nominated for temporary Chairman, and the ballot resulted; Ireland, 188; Beatley, 69. During the absence of the Committee on Credentials, long calls were made for Dr. G. L. Miller, who urged the members of the convention to lay aside all personal feelings and work for the best interest of the party, leaving the delegation to the National Convention untrammeled by instructions, and recommending that no resolution looking to the abandonment of the two-thirds rule be adopted. Upon the return of the Committee on Credentials it was found that 257 delegates were present, the full number of apportioned delegates being 270. Although the committee reported 13 delegates from Clay County instead of 6, as provided in the call, the report was adopted. C. V. Gallagher, of Douglas, was elected President. A motion to sustain the two-thirds rule in the National Convention was adopted by a vote of 90 to 67. Before adjourning, the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, In the Presidential campaign of 1876 all of the historical Democratic policies of sound finance, home rule, and purity of administration were in issue, and at stake in the candidacy of Samuel J. Tilden, and whereas, in that campaign the Democratic Party raised the only standard under which it merited victory, and whereas, in the Republican frauds by which the country was basely cheated of its will and robbed of its elected choice, the whole Republic was despoiled and our institutions injured; therefore

Resolved, That the Democratic Party of Nebraska pledges itself to continue exacution, pursuit, and punishment of all the authors, aiders, abettors, allies, and beneficiaries of that fraud, and promises all its strength to the vindication of the majority rule, which alone can perpetuate our democratic form of government.

Resolved, That in recognition of all Democratic leaders as pledged to fight the strong democratic fight of the Presidency, we pledge to our standard-bearers our united support in such measures as may assain put in issue the great questions of 1876, and as may provide for their most certain vindication against the crime which, in 1876 and 1877, struck down our elected President, despoiled him of his great office, and deprived the Republic of the beneficent results of a Democratic Government and majority rule during the current Presidency.

It was evident that the Tilden men largely predominated in the Convention. This fact was confirmed by the list of delegates chosen to the National Convention. The list is headed by Dr. George L. Miller, editor of the Omaha Herald, and a member of the National Democratic Committee, who made a strong fight for Tilden's nomination at St. Louis in 1876. The other delegates are J. Sterling Morton, of Nebraska City; J. S. North, of Columbus; J. W. Pollock, of West Point; R. S. Mellorey, of Humboldt, and F. A. Herman, of Bloomington. No instructions were given.

GRANT STRONG IN CONNECTICUT.

PREPARING FOR THE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION—EDMUNDS MUCH FAVORED—GRANT THE POPULAR CANDIDATE.

HARTFORD, April 1.—The delegates to the State Republican Convention at New-Haven next Wednesday, will all be elected during the present week. Many of them have already been chosen, and the interest manifested at the town caucuses shows that there has been a very general discussion of Presidential candidates. It would be going contrary to the facts not to admit that the movement in favor of Mr. Edmunds has met with unexpected favor, and will have an influential representation at New-Haven. There has been little personal work done in this direction, except in three or four newspapers, but the readiness with which the suggestion of Mr. Edmunds's name has been taken up shows the high estimation in which he is held, and proves that tried statesmanship and unblemished character can sometimes take the place of personal magnetism in arousing popular enthusiasm. It is not probable that those who favor Mr. Edmunds have any great expectation of his nomination, but his name furnishes an excellent rallying point for the many Republicans who would prefer some other candidate than either Gen. Grant or Mr. Blaine.

Almost the only active work that has been done in the State has been by the few politicians who look to Mr. Blaine as most likely suitably to recognize their efforts in case of his election. Some of them have succeeded in being elected as delegates to the convention, where they will doubtless endeavor to make up in noise and intrigue what they lack in strength. But among the people at large there is very little enthusiasm for the Maine statesman so far as can be gathered from the caucuses. Wherever public interest is aroused in the caucuses, Mr. Blaine's friends are found in a minority, and whatever success he may have in the convention will be the result of personal solicitation in behalf of persons who are desirous of going to Chicago. Some of the candidates who are pushing themselves forward for nomination are so intimately identified with the Blaine movement that it will be remarkable if the convention should allow them to succeed even if they obtain the district nomination. Nothing could be more stupid than for the convention to allow delegates at large to be elected who do not represent the sentiments of a majority of the convention. But this is precisely what is likely to occur in case the absurd precedent is followed of allowing the districts to nominate the delegates at large and accepting them without question.

There is no reason for changing the opinion that more Republicans are in favor of Gen. Grant than of any other candidate, although it is doubtful if those who prefer him as a first choice constitute a majority of the party. There is a deep, quiet feeling in his favor which does not find noisy expression, but will be felt at the convention. Gen. Grant has this additional advantage, that the great majority of those who prefer Edmunds or Washburne or Sherman would rally instantly to the ex-President if it should be necessary to prevent the nomination of Mr. Blaine. This is not because of any personal dislike for the latter, for his ability and great personal magnetism are everywhere conceded, but because of the belief, so wide-spread as to be almost universal, that the nomination of Mr. Blaine would be fatal to Republican success in Connecticut. There is also a general belief that if the choice should be narrowed to Grant and Blaine, the former would make in every respect a desirable chief Executive. His position is known, certainly on every important question, and there would be no fear of his making terms with the dishonest money element, of his being controlled by great corporations, or of his allowing injustice to the poor of any race, Asiatic or African. He could have no ambition except to give the nation a peaceful and prosperous Administration. These are the reasons that find him friends among thoughtful citizens and among practical business men. As heretofore stated, the eight district delegates are by custom allotted to the eight counties, and from present information the probable result will be as follows: Hartford, Litchfield, Tolland, and Windham for Edmunds; New-Haven, Fairfield, New-London, and Middlesex for Grant. If the four delegates at large are elected by the districts instead of by the convention, the result will probably be: First District, Edmunds; Second, Blaine; Third, Edmunds; Fourth, Blaine. If elected by the convention by ballot they will probably be divided between Edmunds and Grant.

GEORGIA TO SUPPORT GRANT.

WHAT THE REPUBLICAN PARTY CAN DO IN GEORGIA—DISAPPOINTMENT IN STORE FOR SHERMAN.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 1.—The political situation in Georgia has elements of encouragement to Republicans despite the top-heavy majority of the organized Democracy. The Independent Party is large and growing. At the last election it carried three Congressional districts, and would have captured a fourth (Atlanta,) if it had put out a good candidate. Since then it has gained steadily in strength. Shrewd Republicans believe the time has come when their party, by good management, can obtain a balance of power in State politics, and by offering a combination with the independents beat the regular Democracy. The Republican State Convention will be held April 21. It will elect delegates to Chicago, and nominate Presidential Electors. If it is decided to co-operate with the Independents in State politics, a platform will be adopted and the nominations for State officers left open; otherwise a State ticket will be chosen.

The growth of the Independent movement in Georgia is one of the signs in Southern politics. In the coming election there will be a full Independent ticket for State officers, and in every Congressional district there are already plans for an active and well-sustained canvass against the Bourbon Democracy. Atlanta itself has become one of the Independent strongholds, and never fails to defeat the organized Democracy when the opposition makes the least show of resistance. The Independents now have three Congressmen, not counting Mr Stephens, who is practically an opponent of the regular organization. They will hold every district they have, and are likely to carry two more, thus giving them a majority of the Georgia delegation. Ex-United States Senator Miller, Congressman Felton, Judge Gus. Wright, Gen. Wofford, Judge Pittman, and other leading Georgians are decided in their opposition, and will wave a black flag in the coming contest. These men have a large following among the farmers and laboring classes, who complain that they have been used by the organization to do the drudgery, but have never yet enjoyed a just proportion of the spoils. The impression is prevalent that the Democratic Party is a sort of aristocracy, and this is doing it serious damage. The division of the white vote will leave the colored voters more free to exercise their choice since the capital and influence of the whites will be no longer wholly on one side.

But the divisions among the Democrats do not extend beyond State issues. Georgia may split to pieces in her State and Congressional elections, but it will be as solid on the Presidential question as it was in 1876, when it gave Tilden 80,000 majority and captured the Democratic banner which Texas offered. The Republican Party has an opportunity of breaking the State Democratic Ring, but it cannot enter a wider field. It can recuperate, to some extent, its lost power, and aid in securing a purer State Government, and it will be for the convention to decide whether it shall make the attempt. The only other work of the convention, that will have a national interest will be the choice of a delegation to Chicago. Sherman has a strong hold among the white Republicans, most of whom are office-holders. His friends are managing his affairs carefully, and claim that he will get Georgia's 22 votes without any trouble. Blaine has a small but select following, which is characterized by its energy and enthusiasm, but it cannot hope to succeed in the convention. The choice of the mass of the party is Grant. The success are enthusiastic for him, and are always adding to his strength. Reports from various parts of the State, by mail and express, are pouring in daily. They have several able leaders, and therefore it is probable that these will secure the Georgia delegation.

DISCUSSIONS AT ALBANY

THE ASSEMBLY CHIEFLY CONSIDERING CITY MATTERS.

MR. BLISS'S SEVERE CASTIGATION OF THE UPHOLDERS OF THE PROPOSED CHARTER AMENDMENTS—THE TENEMENT-HOUSE CIGAR-MAKERS' BILL KILLED AFTER A LIVELY DEBATE.

ALBANY, April 1.—In the morning session of the Assembly to-day, the bill to preserve the purity of elections and prescribing the size of ballots was discussed at some length, and was finally defeated. It seemed at one time that it could be passed, but objection was piled upon objection, until the bill was made to appear impracticable. Mr. Shanley, of Kings, when the bill came up on its third reading, ineffectually sought to except all cities of 300,000 inhabitants. The vote on the bill was 57 to 48. A motion to reconsider was adopted, and that motion was laid on the table. An animated debate took place on the bill to protect the owners of Coney Island, and the bill was passed.

There has been much talk to-day about the charter amendments, which are considered to be in a very dangerous position. A strong and growing feeling of opposition has been awakened in regard to them, and there is every prospect that the will of the best citizens, as expressed in the newspapers, is likely to have due effect and bring the politicians who are pushing it to grief.

Mr. Bliss's argument yesterday afternoon, before the Cities Committee, was a merciless punishment of the charter tinkerers. He had done, he told them, with partisan legislation. He said, ironically, that the charter of 1875 made great gain for the Republicans. Did the Republican Party gain by the appointment of Dishocker as Police Commissioner? Mr. Dishocker, who sat near Mr. Bliss, flushed crimson, and squirmed in his chair. Not a Republican paper in New-York favored the bill. It would furnish places for 400 office-seekers, but the party would lose 400 times 400 votes by it. One gentleman was so confident that he would be appointed a Commissioner of Public Works that he was already going around making contracts. He said he had a plan by which $15,000,000 could be saved in expenses annually. This bill did not intend to save. "You can't get enough sugar on your pill to make the citizens swallow it." To Mr. Varnum he said that he noticed whenever a proposition was made to reduce salaries, the Constitution is always put out to wet-nurse, but whenever the Constitution was disregarded to make places for politicians, not a word was said about it. Mr. Bliss said that this Legislature was disregarding public sentiment more completely than any Legislature since Tweed's time, and that it was going in the same direction. This was not pleasing to the committee or the Advisory Board, and the members all looked deeply annoyed. He went on: "If this bill is for the interest of the Republican Party, all I've got to say is, God save the Republican Party. This will not do it." He declared that any excess of $30,000 expenditure by the Excise Board was a clear steal, as bad as any of Tweed's crimes. "The bill," said he, "is a fraud from beginning to end, and is intended to be a fraud." Gentlemen of the Mr. Chairman, have been imposed upon in a way that does not do any credit to your sagacity. Why don't you reduce the salary of the Clerk of the Common Pleas? Because Charlie Blackie is the Clerk, and an amendment to that effect would hurt him. I tell you its simply sham and bosh, and that the members who introduced the bill know that it was." The amendments in regard to Police Justices had been made to save "Jake" Patterson. He pointed out several bad flaws in the amendments, and then said: "That's what you call making a charter. You know and I know that it is a sham. It had already been amended in the Senate. The changes were not made for nothing." He ventured his opinion as a lawyer that the charter could be upset as unconstitutional. He told Mr. Varnum that he did not believe he [Mr. Varnum] would risk his reputation as a lawyer on it, and advised him to stick to insurance matters, at which everybody laughed, much to Mr. Varnum's annoyance. In speaking of the proposition to keep the Street-cleaning Department in the Police Board, he declared boldly that the Street-cleaning Department was rotten clean through, and that it had contaminated everybody who had ever come in contact with it. He criticised the proposed change in the Park Department, when Mr. Varnum said the bill had been amended in the Senate, and admitted that it was his idea to make the board consist of 10 members. "Do you call that taking it out of politics?" asked Mr. Bliss. "You provide that there shall be five Republicans and five Democrats in the board. Thus looks like taking it into politics." He closed by saying that he was obliged for the attention of the committee, but he knew his words were thrown away, as the understanding was that the charter was to be "put through."

Mr. Terry introduced a bill "relative to contracts for advertisements in newspapers published on Sunday." It amends an act of April 5, 1871, and provides that all contracts made with publishers of newspapers published, dated, or issued on the first day of the week shall be legal and binding as contracts made with newspapers dated or published on any other day of the week, and all legal notices, papers, or proceedings published in such paper on that day shall be equally legal and valid as if published on any other day of the week.

Mr. Low, of Niagara, introduced a bill to-day to authorize the selection, location, and appropriation of lands in the Village of Niagara Falls for a State reservation, and to preserve the scenery of Niagara Falls. It appoints George Geddes, Frederick E. Church, Frederick Law Olmsted, William Dorsheimer, and Bronson C. Rumsey a Board of Commissioners, to hold office for five years, without compensation. In case of refusal to serve on the part of any of the gentlemen named, the Governor shall fill vacancies. These Commissioners are to locate such lands in the Village of Niagara Falls as may in their opinion be proper and necessary to preserve the scenery of the Falls of Niagara and restore it to its natural condition. Before proceedings are taken to acquire title in any of the lands, the Commissioners are to file a map in the Secretary of State's office. The bill provides for a commission of the Supreme Court in the Eighth Judicial District, who are to act as Commissioners of Appraisement, to ascertain and report the just compensation to be paid to the persons or corporations owning or having an interest in the property. Several sections provide how the Commissioners shall proceed to determine the just value of the property sought to be condemned. The bill also provides for the appropriation of $10,000 to carry out its provisions.

Mr. Grosse moved his bill, at the afternoon session, to prohibit the manufacture of cigars in tenement-houses. Mr. Grosse made a long speech in behalf of it, and he was followed by Mr. Wren in its favor. Mr. Travis ridiculed Mr. Wren's speech as high flown, and said the bill was in the interest of the Cigar-makers' Union. Mr. Alvord thought that plain common sense and knowledge of the law ought to show to every man that this bill attacked inherent rights and the freedom guaranteed by the Constitution. Mr. Grosse admitted that the trade-unions were supporting him in his advocacy of the bill; he said he understood that $8,000 had been raised to defeat the bill, and wanted to know how it had been distributed. Mr. Alvord said he would like to know how it had been distributed, for he had not received his share. Mr. Mitchell said he had been visited by a delegation consisting of a tailor, a printer, and a cigar-maker, all in favor of the bill, and that they had threatened him with defeat in case he opposed it and afterward became a candidate for election. It was nearly 6 o'clock when Mr. Alvord moved to report progress. The committee rose, and Mr. Grosse then moved to order the bill to a third reading. This motion was lost by a vote of 46 to 40. The bill was then recommitted to the Committee on Trades and Manufactures for the purpose of having its enacting clause stricken out, thus killing it.

THE SENATE'S WORK.

KEEPING ELEVATED ROADS AWAY FROM THE PARKS—THE THREE-TIER CHARTER.

ALBANY, April 1.—The bill to protect the public parks of New-York City and the adjacent streets from the encroachments of elevated railroads came up in the Senate this morning and elicited a long discussion. The amendments made to the bill in the Railroad Committee were charged by Mr. Forster and others with being in the interest of the railroads, especially of the undeveloped quick-transit scheme known as Swain's three-tier road. Before the discussion closed all these amendments were stricken out and several new ones substituted which make it impossible for any elevated railroad to use or occupy any public park in the City, except the portion of the Battery now occupied by the New-York Elevated Road. As the bill now stands on the order of third readings, it is as follows:

"It shall not be lawful to erect use or occupy, for the purpose of an elevated railroad, any portions of the following-named streets, areas, and places in the City of New-York, that is to say: The grand circle at Fifty-eighth and Fifty-ninth streets and Eighth-avenue; the Fifth-avenue circle at Fifty-eighth-street and Fifty-ninth-street; Broadway, Fifth-avenue, and Eighth-avenue between the southerly line of Fifty-ninth-street and the northerly line of One Hundred and Tenth-street, and the whole of Fifty-ninth-street and of One Hundred and Tenth-street, between Fifth-avenue and Eighth-avenue, and all streets and avenues bounding Morningside Park or Riverside Park; but nothing herein contained shall be construed to take away any right heretofore given by the report of the Rapid Transit Commissioners, so called, or any existing right to cross at an elevation any of said streets, or to affect any act heretofore passed restricting the right to use or occupy any of said streets, areas, or places; and no railroad, elevated or otherwise, hereafter built, shall run through any part in the City of New-York. Nothing in this act shall be construed to confirm any right to use the Battery, beyond the permit from the Park Commissioners now existing. And an elevated railroad shall be constructed over the sidewalk or on State-street from Whitehall-street to Battery-place."

Mr. Forster's bill to repeal the charter of the Metropolitan Transit Company, (Swain's three-tier road,) granted in 1872, was discussed at some length in Committee of the Whole. Mr. Madden vigorously opposed the bill, and said that the charter which it was proposed to repeal was one of the best railroad charters ever granted by the Legislature. It had been pronounced "infamous," but it was introduced and advocated by the late Senator Hardenbergh, one of the ablest and purest Senators that ever sat in that body. Mr. Madden closed by moving to strike out the enacting clause of the repeal bill, which was carried by a vote of 13 to 8. In the Senate, Mr. Forster moved to disagree with the report of the committee, and that the motion lie on the table. Mr. Woodin raised a point of order on some ruling of Lieut.-Gov. Hoskins in connection with the discussion by Senators of which the Lieutenant-Governor made the remark that Mr. Woodin's views were not according to the understanding of the Chair. Mr. Woodin replied that he was "not addressing the understanding of the Chair so much as the understanding of the Senate." While Mr. Forster's motion was pending, the Senate went into executive session.

The Judiciary Committee reported adversely the bill to allow corporations to pay any rate of interest without the penalty of the Usury laws. It also reported adversely the bill to provide for the appointment of official Referees in the First Judicial District. The bill to enable the Tax Commissioners of New-York to extend the time for making and correcting assessments for taxes in New-York City was passed out of its order by unanimous consent. The bill to organize the Brooklyn Board of Charities was passed, but afterward, at Mr. Jacobs's request, and by the consent of Mr. Schroeder, a motion to reconsider the vote was permitted to lie on the table until certain persons in Brooklyn could be heard from, who telegraphed that they had some important facts to communicate touching the bill. The Senate resolved to hold evening sessions hereafter on Tuesdays and Thursdays, commencing next week. Mr. Strahan asked that his charter for New-York be recommitted to the Committee on Cities for additional amendments, the same to retain its place on general orders. The request was granted.

SMYTH'S SUCCESSOR NAMED.

THE HON. JOHN D. LAWSON APPOINTED—PROBABILITY THAT HE WILL BE CONFIRMED.

ALBANY, April 1.—The long agony over the Superintendent of Insurance was relieved to-day by the Governor, who sent to the Senate the name of a gentleman, to succeed John F. Smyth, who will be confirmed without difficulty if he will consent to accept the office. The Governor's nominee is the Hon. John D. Lawson, formerly member of Congress from New-York and well known in that City. Great doubt is expressed by those who know Mr. Lawson whether he will accept, but it is hardly probable that the Governor wishes to continue the farce of offering the place to men who will not take it, and he has doubtless informed himself on that point before sending in the name of Mr. Lawson. A rumor was circulated around the Capitol, and accepted by every one as true, until the nomination was announced in executive session, that the nominee was Charles P. Easton, of Albany, a politician of the John F. Smyth stripe. His name was telegraphed to several New-York evening papers as the actual appointee.

Mr. Lawson said last evening that he had not yet received any official communication announcing his appointment, and until he did so, he must decline to state whether or not he would accept the position.

Mr. Lawson was born in Montgomery, Orange County, in this State, Feb. 18, 1816, and was educated in the schools of his native village. He was a merchant in Broadway for 25 years, and retired from business as a member of the firm of Lawson & Martin, in 1868. He was a delegate to the National Republican Conventions of 1868 and 1872, and persistently declined to accept public office until 1873, when he was elected a member of the Forty-third Congress from the Eighth District. He ran for a second term, but was defeated. He has declined several prominent positions, notably that of Commissioner of Emigration, tendered him by Gov. Cornell, and both the Police Commissionership and Presidency of the Board of Tax Commissioners, tendered him by the Mayor. He has been a resident of the Seventh Assembly District for 30 years, and has been an active member of the district Republican association since its formation. He is a member of the Union League Club, and the Lincoln Club of the Seventh Assembly District.

SHERMAN INSPECTING HIS FENCES.

HE THINKS IT STRANGE THAT ANY POLITICAL OBJECT IS ATTACHED TO HIS OHIO VISIT.

CINCINNATI, April 1.—Secretary Sherman spent most of the day at his rooms in Mansfield, receiving his numerous friends and acquaintances. He also spent some time at his residence and looking over his extensive and beautiful grounds. He finds his fences all in good order. He will leave there to-morrow for Columbus. He will be met at the depot and taken to the residence of Gov. Foster. In the afternoon he will occupy a parlor at the Neil House, where he will receive his friends. In the evening he will attend a reception at Gov. Foster's, and later in the evening will be serenaded. A reporter at Mansfield asked him about the object of his visit to Ohio, to which he replied: "The newspapers have made a great deal out of my visit here, but I assure you my coming was on strictly private business. I became uneasy in the thought that I can't come here to Mansfield, where I have lived most of my life, without the papers telegraphing my object, and sending representatives to find out what I am doing here. I am here for no political purpose; for nothing but to attend to some private matters." Attempts to gain his views as to the management of his interests in Ohio were unavailing. To all questions he replied that he had nothing to say. Mr. Loomis, Secretary of the Ohio Sherman Club, went from Columbus to Mansfield for an advance consultation with the Secretary.

IOWA'S COMING CONVENTION.

ANSIS, Iowa, April 1.—The Republicans held a convention here this afternoon to choose delegates to the State Convention. Resolutions were unanimously passed to instruct the delegates for Senator James G. Blaine.

LIBERALS STILL GAINING

MR. GLADSTONE'S PARTY ALMOST SURE OF SUCCESS.

THE BEACONSFIELD GOVERNMENT PROBABLY DEFEATED—ONE-THIRD OF THE COMMONERS ALREADY CHOSEN—A LIBERAL GAIN OF 29 SEATS THUS FAR.

LONDON, April 2.—The net Liberal gain in the elections is now 29 seats.

The Times, in its leader, says: "About a third of the entire number of members of the House of Commons have now been elected, and the aggregate result is that the Conservative majority has been replaced by a Liberal majority. The balance of the gains and losses received yesterday will suffice to set at rest many hopes and fears and to give the country the means of estimating the future relations of parties in the House of Commons."

The Standard's leading editorial this morning declares that the results of yesterday's voting only served to increase the Government's losses. The Conservative majority has well-nigh disappeared, and the question no longer is whether the Ministry will be able to hold their own, but whether the Opposition will secure such a majority as will enable them to take office with a reasonable prospect of carrying on the business of the country satisfactorily.

The News, in its leader this morning, says: "With daily increasing emphasis the country is declaring condemnation of Lord Beaconsfield's Government and its determination to efface it. The Conservative majority has ceased to exist." The News urges all timid Liberals who dread a weak majority to do their best to strengthen it.

BERLIN, April 1.—The results of the elections in Great Britain have produced a most profound sensation here. It is thought the reports of the Liberal success are exaggerated.

LONDON, April 1.—There was polling in 76 constituencies to-day and nominations in 48.

The Standard, Conservative organ, this morning says: "It cannot be denied that yesterday's elections possess interest and significance, but it is easy to exaggerate the meaning and importance of the Liberal gains. The minor defeats of Conservative candidates are as likely to prove temporary as the important victories in the elections which are to follow."

The Daily Telegraph says: "No such sweeping change is manifested as that which struck down a great party in 1874. The result cannot be predicted from one day's polling."

The Pall Mall Gazette admits that the Government is defeated.

The Echo says that the total number of votes cast thus far aggregate 343,568 Liberal, and 231,370 Tory.

For London (city) the following candidates have been elected: Alderman William J. R. Cotton, (Conservative,) re-elected, receiving 10,329 votes; Mr. Frederick W. Rowe, (Conservative,) receiving 10,274 votes; the Right Hon. John G. Hubbard, (Conservative,) re-elected, receiving 10,256 votes, and Alderman William Lawrence, (Liberal,) receiving 5,950 votes. Messrs. R. Martin and W. Morrison (Liberals) were defeated, receiving 5,837 and 5,743 votes respectively. This leaves the representation from London City relatively unchanged.

For Leeds, the following have been elected: The Right Hon. William E. Gladstone, (Liberal,) receiving 24,522 votes; John Barran (Liberal,) re-elected, receiving 23,647 votes, and W. L. Jackson, (Conservative,) receiving 13,331 votes. This gives Leeds a Liberal gain of one.

For Greenwich, Mr. Thomas W. Boord (Conservative) was re-elected, receiving 9,243 votes, and Baron de Worms (Conservative) was elected, receiving 9,240 votes—a Conservative gain of one member. Mr. J. S. Saunders (Liberal) was defeated, receiving 8,142 votes.

The following candidates have been re-elected without opposition: Mr. James W. Barclay, (Liberal,) for Forfarshire; the Hon. Edward H. T. Digby, (Conservative,) for Dorsetshire; Mr. John Floyer, (Conservative,) for Dorsetshire; Sir George M. Grant, (Liberal,) for Elginshire and Nairnshire; Mr. Mitchell-Henry, (Home Ruler,) for Galway County; Mr. A. J. B. Beresford-Hope, (Conservative,) for Cambridge University; Major John P. Nolan, (Home Ruler,) for Galway County; the Hon. William H. B. Portman, (Liberal,) for Dorsetshire, and the Right Hon. Spencer Horatio Walpole, (Conservative,) for Cambridge University; Sir R. Slingsby Bethell, (Home Ruler,) for Kerry County; Mr. Rowland P. Blennerhassett, (Home Ruler,) for Kerry County, re-elected; Sir Walter Barttelot, (Conservative,) for Sussex, West, re-elected; Mr. Andrew Grant, (Liberal,) for Leith District, re-elected; Earl of March, (Conservative,) for Sussex, West, re-elected; Mr. Christopher R. M. Talbot, (Liberal,) for Glamorganshire, re-elected; Mr. Henry Hussey Vivian, (Liberal,) for Glamorganshire, re-elected; Mr. F. Compton, (Conservative,) for Hampshire South, a Conservative gain; Mr. William H. O'Sullivan, (Home Ruler,) for Limerick County, re-elected; Lord Henry J. Montagu-Douglas Scott, (Conservative,) for Hampshire South, re-elected; Mr. Edmond J. Synan, (Home Ruler,) for Limerick County, re-elected; the Right Hon. Lord Grosvenor, (Liberal,) for Flintshire, re-elected.

The following candidates for Parliament have been elected to-day at the polls: Mr. Edward T. Gourley, (Liberal,) for Sunderland, re-elected; Sir Henry M. Havelock, (Liberal,) for Sunderland, re-elected; Mr. E. Heneage, (Liberal,) for Great Grimsby, (this constituency was represented in the last Parliament by Mr. Alfred M. Watkins, a Moderate Liberal;) Sir James M. McG. Hogg, Chairman of the Metropolitan Board of Works, (Conservative,) for Truro, re-elected; Mr. Charles H. Hopwood, (Liberal,) for Stockport, re-elected; Mr. Frederick Pennington, (Liberal,) for Stockport, re-elected; Mr. Charles P. Phipps, (Conservative,) for Westbury, (this constituency was represented in the last Parliament by Mr. A. Laverton, a Liberal;) Mr. Bernhard Samuelson, (Liberal,) for Banbury, re-elected; Mr. Henry B. Sheridan, (Liberal,) for Dudley, re-elected; Mr. E. W. Brydges-Willyams, (Liberal,) for Truro, a Liberal gain; Mr. Arthur James Balfour, (Conservative,) for Hertford, re-elected; Mr. J. Spencer Balfour, (Liberal,) for Tamworth, a Liberal gain; Mr. Hamar A. Bass, (Liberal,) for Tamworth, re-elected; Mr. William H. Christie, (Conservative,) for Lewes, re-elected; Mr. G. Shaw Lefevre, (Liberal,) for Reading, re-elected; Mr. George Palmer, (Liberal,) for Reading, re-elected; Sir H. L. Thompson, (Liberal,) for Knaresborough, (this constituency was represented in the last House by Mr. B. T. Wood, a Conservative;) Sir Henry Tyler, connected with Canadian railways, (Conservative,) for Harwich; Mr. Warton, (Conservative,) for Bridport; (this constituency was represented in the last House by Mr. P. Ball, a Liberal;) Mr. E. Waugh, (Liberal,) for Cockermouth; Mr. John Whitwell, (Liberal,) for Kendal, re-elected; Sir John H. Heathcoat-Amory, (Liberal,) for Tiverton, re-elected; Mr. William C. Brocklehurst, (Liberal,) for Macclesfield, re-elected; Mr. David Chadwick, (Liberal,) for Macclesfield, re-elected; the Right Hon. Hugh C. E. Childers, (Liberal,) for Pontefract, re-elected; Lord Randolph H. Spencer-Churchill, (Conservative,) for Woodstock, re-elected; Sir Charles C. Clifford, (Liberal,) for Newport, Isle of Wight, re-elected; the Hon. George H. Windsor-Clive, (Conservative,) for Ludlow, re-elected; Mr. Thomas C. Cobbold, (Conservative,) for Ipswich, re-elected; Mr. Jesse Collings, (Liberal,) for Ipswich, a Liberal gain; Mr. Charles C. Cotes, (Liberal,) for Shrewsbury, re-elected; Mr. George Courtauld, (Liberal,) for Maldon, re-elected; Mr. Thomas Earp, (Liberal,) for Newark, re-elected; Mr. Henry Edwards, (Liberal,) for Weymouth, re-elected; Mr. C. bungs at the pretrying or consumption of the Election laws. To this proposition I invite the attention of the Democrats of the majority who do not the honor to be present.

Mr. EATON—That is a minority.

Mr. EDMUNDS—The minority do not need to be convinced.

Mr. Edmunds read and commented upon the Election laws, and said the Special Deputies appointed were not especially election officers, but were appointed under the general law authorizing Marshals to employ Deputies to aid them in enforcing the laws. He wished to show how the provision in this bill was obnoxious to the same objections urged against the previous attempt to destroy the whole act of the Election laws. Marshals were executive officers, and properly appointed by the Executive Department. We have them appointed by the Judicial Department, yet we violate the principle of the separation of the departments of the Government. He was opposed to arraying political partisans before a court, and compelling courts to devote their time to allowing partisans to carry out the laws. He asked the Democratic Senators if they thought such a system was a good one for the permanent administration of the laws? He was confident that they did not, and that if a Democratic President should be elected, this act, if passed, would be then repealed immediately, for the Democrats had acknowledged, in the debate on this question, that their efforts were not to make the laws, but were for the purpose of keeping them hence when they had the power they would sweep them from the statute-book. This measure was palpably a mere temporary party expedient. The Deputies now appointed are responsible to the Marshal, and he controls them. These officers are proposed to be appointed by the courts, would not be Deputy Marshals, and would not be controllable by the Marshal. This was the most skillful attempt to weaken the laws. These partisan officers would be independent of any executive control. Nobody but the courts could remove them, consequently if the court adjourned before the election was over they would remain in office until the court convened again. The bill provides that should there be no session of the Circuit Courts in the States where such Marshals are to be appointed, then the District Judges are authorized to convene their courts for the purpose. Was there a State in the Union where the Circuit Courts did not convene? Certainly not. The consequence was that the event on the contingency of which the District Court was convened can never happen. This was another provision designed to make the provisions of the present law a dead letter. If the United States courts were not in session in November when the election took place, and this was the case in several States, no Deputies could be appointed. In regard to the requirement that the two Deputies to be appointed must be of different political parties, Mr. Edmunds said such a provision for the appointment of executive officers was absurd. It would be as sensible to provide that every Militia regiment should have a Democratic and Republican Colonel, one to command one day and the other the next. Executive officers were employed to carry out the laws, and to caught to have nothing to do with politics. Mr. Edmunds then spoke at some length on the danger of introducing this system of appointing officers. Who was to judge as to the "good moral character" of the candidates. The term was too vague for legal definition. He regretted that the majority were to abrogate just and necessary laws. "I do not remember," he continued, "a single statute passed during the rebellion, or since its close, which was directed to the preservation of liberty, the execution of justice, and the protection of equal rights, that has not been assailed in this chamber, and that some measure or another has not been brought forward to overthrow, and this, as it seems to me, is only one brick in that vast edifice of intended extra-constitutional or revolutionary reaction. I remember the bill of the Senator from Kentucky [Mr. Beck] now pending, which provides for the repeal of nearly all the laws relating to taking the vote—and yet which is so framed as to give every man who had been an enemy of his country a right to appeal to the Treasury of the United States to pay him for the losses which he had suffered. I remember, too, that this is by design or accident I do not know; but that is its effect. Then there is the bill of my honorable friend from Maryland [Mr. Whyte] which provides in substance for cutting up root and branch the exercise of the judicial power of the United States in reviewing or relieving from the effect of the decisions of the State courts in cases arising under the Constitution and laws of the United States—the repeal substantially of all laws covered by that bill, laws that some of them were passed as early as the time of Andrew Jackson, by what was then more truly than now a Democratic Congress, and approved by that great man, designed to protect the officers and agents of the United States in securing justice, and in the defense of their rights in the tribunals of the United States. All these are to go with these Election laws. Then, there is the bill of my honorable friend from Delaware [Mr. Bayard], now on the calendar, to repeal the present law providing for the appointment of Supervisors of Election altogether, and to make a new law—inasmuch as it is feared that he cannot get entirely rid of the old one without putting something in its place just now; to make a supervisor, by which the appointment of Supervisors of Election anywhere in the United States shall depend on the will of the Democratic majority in this body; which would be a perfectly safe and convenient thing if we could only get it done. Then there is the other bill of my honorable friend [Mr. Bayard,] running through the same subject of assailing these provisions of law, providing that no arrest shall be made for any crime against the United States by a Marshal of the United States, or his Deputy, on election day, at any place in any State. Every State has laws that provide for arresting people on election days as well as at other times; but that is not good enough for modern notions. But the United States, even on the occasion of the election of one part of its own Government, members of the House of Representatives, shall not have power to lay its hands, by due process of law, upon the biggest criminal that there may be, should he take shelter at a voting place. What would be the effect? Why, only to turn over the ballot-boxes in every place where there was any disposition to violate the laws of the United States, and give the authority of the mob the ballot-box stuffer, the tissue-ballot man, the Governor and his Council of a State, perhaps. That is only another stone in this great edifice which we observe growing up. Then, I have noticed introduced in a former Congress, and I believe in this one, a bill to remove the Statute of Limitations and all the present safeguards against claims, as well as the provisions about loyalty, that I have spoken of before, so as to open up once more claims for all that has been lost during the years of disturbance from 1861 to this time. That is still being pushed somewhere. Then there is the famous bill, last but not least, of my friend from Indiana, [Mr. McDonald.] It is not quite through yet, to be sure. It went through one house, but it failed somewhere. It does seem that no one in our party can even make the President of the United States shall not be Commander-in-Chief of the Army of the United States, and on that day the Army shall not suppress anything, but there shall be a general carnival of riot, so far as any power of the Executive under the Constitution shall exist to put it down. That stands at the head of the calendar. I am only surprised that my friend, in his eagerness to carry on his part in this great work of destruction and of reconstruction on different principles, has not pushed it through before this. This is the situation of these things very briefly stated, and I only need to sum it up by saying that this measure, sinks on a deficiency bill to pay a past due debt of the United States, the very existence of which would disgrace anybody else but us, on the condition upon which it is to be paid is only one other link in this chain of propositions intended to reverse everything that has taken place and now exists for the security and protection of the people of the United States, under the new Constitution. And so is that I hope my honorable friends on the other side will not insist upon pressing it. They had better pass this bill and pay the debt of the United States, and leave the changes of its laws for more suitable occasions and for better methods. And I do not say this because I do not know, but that I do—because I do not know, I say it because I think and feel what so many people profess, and that is a desire for the peace and the good order and the prosperity of the people of the United States. But that peace and good order and fraternity must be with us, as a peace and good order and fraternity that is real and felt everywhere, and a fraternity that is what its name implies—the peace of justice, the peace of equal law, the peace of personal security, the peace of freedom, of fair and just elections, the peace whose product and as it were step-sister is prosperity. The great and only throne is justice everywhere, and justice every where can only be had, as we all know, by equal law, justly administered. That is what we desire on this side of the chamber, that is what we intend shall not be broken down if we can help it, and we think we can."

Mr. BARKER, of Connecticut—The remarks of the honorable Senator from Vermont are probably, to use a favorite expression of his made with a "design to affect the character of this Government. Time will show the effect of the argument that has been made to-day. The Democratic Party, which has been assailed by the Senator from Vermont, is the party of the Constitution. The Democratic Party always stands by the Constitution and the laws made in pursuance of the Constitution, and when we find laws on the statute-books that in our judgment are objectionable, and laws which conflict with the Constitution, we take measures to repeal such laws. Fault is found with this bill because it says that "said Special Deputies shall be appointed in equal number from the different political parties, and that the persons appointed shall be of good moral character. The honorable Senator from Vermont finds fault with the bill in that regard, and I don't wonder at it. Under the laws of the United States, heretofore, there have been appointed as Special Deputy Marshals and Supervisors keepers of houses of prostitution and convicts just pardoned from State Prisons; and I beg to say to you, Mr. President, that the Democratic members of the Senate intend to put a stop to that. The honorable Senator from Vermont chooses to twit in that sneer, he may do so; and if there be any other excellent Senator who desires to lift up his voice in favor of that class of officers, we shall be very happy to hear from him.

The yeas and nays were then asked, Mr. CONKLING calling for the yeas and nays, the vote being yeas 33, nays 31—a party vote.

DEFEATING CUBAN INSURGENTS.

HAVANA, April 1.—A party of insurgents were defeated on March 27 in the Santa Clara district. The insurgents were overtaken the next day in the Remedios district, where they were completely beaten and dispersed. They left behind five dead, of whom two were Lieutenants. The Spanish had one killed and three wounded. Another party was beaten in the jurisdiction of Cinco Villas; four were killed, among them Capt. Alejandro Garcia, nephew of the well-known Julio Sanguily. Numerous other small engagements and dispersals are reported in the Provinces of Santiago and Santiago de Cuba. The insurgents are entrenched in small bands, extending into the jurisdiction of Cinco Villas. These outside of the provinces of Santiago de Cuba cannot openly on either bands, and are the terror of peaceful citizens.

THE PUBLIC DEBT DECREASING.

A REDUCTION OF $14,719,397 LAST MONTH—THE FIRST GROWING SINCE 1872.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—The reduction in the public debt during March was $14,719,397, and for the nine months ending yesterday nearly $47,000,000. The reduction of last month is the largest made in any one month since April, 1872, when it was nearly $15,500,000. For March, 1877, the reduction was over $14,000,000, but nearly $10,000,000 of this amount was derived from the Geneva award, which was covered into the Treasury that month. The unusually large reduction for March was due entirely to the increased receipts from Customs and internal revenue, a detailed statement of which will be found below.

The debt statement issued to-day shows a reduction in the interest-bearing debt, compared with the statement issued March 1, of $9,514,450. This amount does not include the $5,000,000 of bonds purchased on Wednesday. For the first three months of the current fiscal year the aggregate reduction in the debt was less than $5,000, so that the reduction of $47,000,000 shown by the March debt statement for the nine months just closed was in fact accomplished since Oct. 1, 1879, a period of six months, being an average monthly reduction of nearly $8,000,000. The available cash now in the Treasury, after deducting all demand liabilities, is $152,685,101, which is an increase of over $1,300,000 compared with March 1. That portion of the assets called by the Treasurer "gold coin and bullion" shows an increase for the month, after deducting called bonds, interest due and unpaid, and outstanding gold certificates of nearly $1,300,000, a sum about equal to the increase in the net available balance. Deducting the silver certificates outstanding, there is now on hand 29,151,422 standard silver dollars, an increase over March 1 of $1,549,249. The manufacture of these coins during March was $2,350,200, which shows that the net amount of silver dollars put into circulation last month is a trifle over $800,000. There is an increase in fractional silver coins over March 1 of $810,000. The weight of the silver dollars and fractional silver now owned by the Treasury is about 850 tons. Including the deposits held by national banks the amount of United States and national bank notes now held by the Treasury is $37,713,285, against which the outstanding liabilities are $34,727,560. The following is a recapitulation of the debt statement:

(NOTE.—From a final revision of the 4 per cent loan accounts, it has been found that of the receipts on account of $1,850, created as accrued interest, was in fact principal. The amount has now been carried into the Treasury as principal and the bonds issued therefrom.)

The aggregate receipts of the Government for March were $30,840,413, against $20,782,834 for the corresponding month of 1879. The expenditures for March, 1880, were about $4,000,000 less than for March, 1879; the Customs receipts for last month were $20,170,692, against $13,281,521 for March, 1879, and the internal revenue receipts were $9,422,550, against $7,468,559 for the same month of last year. The receipts from all other sources show an increase of over $1,200,000 in favor of last month. The following table will show the receipts and expenditures for the nine months ending yesterday compared with the corresponding nine months of 1879:

	1880.	1879.
Customs	$137,835,016	$102,319,623
Internal revenue	89,391,375	80,552,483

NOTES FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, April 1, 1880.

The receipts from internal revenue to-day were $542,640 28, and from Customs, $271,192 92.

The name of the Post Office at Old Point Comfort, Md., was changed to-day to Fortress Monroe.

The Treasury Department to-day purchased 315,000 ounces of silver for the Philadelphia and San Francisco Mints.

The Commissioner of Internal Revenue to-day received a letter from St. Louis, bearing the initials of "O. B.," containing $500. The writer said: "I intended keeping this money, because the Government owes it to me; but upon reflection I concluded that two wrongs did not make a right." The money will be placed to the credit of the conscience fund.

The House Committee on Elections took up the Donnelly-Washburn case to-day, and upon the first motion that Mr. Washburn is entitled to his seat, decided in the negative by yeas 5, nays 6. Mr. Manning's resolution declaring Mr. Donnelly entitled to the seat was then put, and likewise decided in the negative—yeas 4, nays 8. This action will be embodied in a report to the House declaring Mr. Washburn's seat vacant, and remanding the matter to the people of the district for a new election.

The House Committee on the Revision of the Laws agreed to-day to report the following bill to the House, and ask a suspension of the rules to put it upon its passage: "That hereafter no judgment rendered by the United States Circuit and District Courts in the several States and Territories of the United States shall prevent the real cause of the judgment from being inquired into in any other court of the United States, or of any State, when the validity of such judgment is in question, or when the same is sought to be enforced, or when the same is sought to be enforced, or when the same is sought to be enforced

NEW PUBLICATIONS

NOTES OF RECENT BOOKS.

—The Little Countess. T. S. Peterson.—Octave Feuillet is a writer who needs all the art employed by French literary men to make his novels supportable. Although this novelette is readable in French, it is hardly worth the paper it is printed upon when translated into English.

—Studies in the New Testament. Charles Scribner's Sons.—The Pastor of the Memorial Church is Dr. Charles S. Robinson. Articles prepared by him for a religious newspaper have been put together without change from their colloquial form. Each one is on a particular text, as sermons are written.

—The Act to Abolish Imprisonment for Debt. Edward G. Ward.—A little treatise, bound in legal calf and decorated with several cuts showing various law buildings of old New-York, is put out by the Hon. David McAdam, a Justice of the New-York Marine Court. A portrait of the Hon. Silas M. Stillwell, after whom the act to abolish imprisonment for debt is called, forms a frontispiece.

—The Essentials of Anatomy. G. P. Putnam's Sons.—Two Professors in the Medical School of the New-York University, Drs. Darling and Kenney, have made a most useful digest of exhaustive medical treatises with the object of giving to the student and the general practitioner a text-book and book of reference, which shall not at all supersede the works of authors like Quain, Gray, and others, but save time when the object is not to learn full details, but to strike at generalities. No illustrations are given, since the treatise is not meant to supplant but to accompany the standard text-books.

—Sewers and Drains. D. Van Nostrand.—An illustrated octavo, with diagrams and tables, investigates the subject of sewage in populous districts; rules and formulæ determine the dimensions of drains and sewers under various circumstances. The work is by Julius W. Adams, Chief Engineer to the Board of City Works and Consulting Engineer to the Board of Health, Brooklyn. In 1857 the author was charged with the preparation of plans for the sewering of Brooklyn for an area of 20 square miles. In regard to the dry earth system, Mr. Adams allows that it has great advantages over the old midden heaps and cesspools, but maintains that it has not been shown that the compost is disinfected as well as deodorized.

—Native Flowers and Ferns. B. W. Bond & Co.—Four more parts of the series of flowers and ferns of the United States, by Thomas Meehan, bring the publication to the twentieth number of the second volume in the second series. In Part 17 an extra plate, printed as usual, in delicate colors on fine board, takes the place of No. 26 of Part 7. In the latter, Solidago simplicifolia was printed as Solidago petiolaris. The editor corrects this mistake at an expense to himself of $200. Part 18 contains a picture of the marsh marigold, with the usual four pages of text. Linnæus noted that it opened simultaneously with the sound of the cuckoo, but that was in a northern latitude. The name has been referred to the Virgin Mary, but Prior asserts that it comes from the Saxon mate gaulla or "marsh-horse-gold" flower. In some parts of England they go under the name of "Mayblebs."

—William Lloyd Garrison. Charles Drew.—Mr. Oliver Johnson has brought together various letters to the daily press into a volume, which has an appropriate introduction by John G. Whittier, and contains at the end the tributes of the Quaker poet, in verse, to the leader of the Abolitionists. The biography is more interesting to persons especially conversant with politics just before the war than to the general reader, but the testimony of a friend of Garrison, who was of and in the Abolition movement, is likely to increase in value as time goes on. The accounts of Boston before the war show how really homogeneous was the country, from Maine to Florida, until the agitation against slavery began to draw the lines and compel everybody to take sides for or against the Abolitionists. The latter were "socially ostracised" in New-England quite after the modern fashion.

—Bunte Bilther. S. Zickel.—A member of the editorial staff of one of our German newspapers, Julius Brück by name, prints a modest pamphlet of verses of jovial and serious contents. The pieces are divided into "Laughing Songs" and "Heart and World" songs. Herr Brück is master of an easy, convivial style, to which the sonorous rhymes of the German language add solidity. The volume opens with a piece written for the round table of Prince Carnival, called "Welt und Wein":

"Narrenfreunde, lasst's beim Alten
Junge Weiber—alter Wein!
Wie bis heute ihr's behalten
Soll es heut' und immer sein!"

An ambitious poem, called "Glaube und Wissenschaft," sings of science as the true religion and of truth as the true God. If any one wants to see a close translation into German of Poe's "Raven," let him get Herr Brück's little book.

—The Maiden's Lodge. Robert Carter & Brothers.—With Queen Anne furniture in the drawing-room, and Queen Anne buildings in the street, why not Queen Anne books on the library table? "The Maiden's Lodge" is a tale of the reign of Queen Anne told by Emily Sarah Holt. The resemblance between the reigns of Anne and Victoria, says the author, is most of all discernible in the fact that both were ages "of veneer." There was great form of godliness with general denial of its power; hot party spirit, with few men remarkable for genuine political convictions; a religious world organized in opulent volumes, but little honest desire to walk humbly with God. The book teaches a lesson for the present by conjuring up a romance of that age. The romance is pleasantly written, but can hardly be said to bring up very vividly the last century, notwithstanding some quaintness in the phraseology.

—The Christian Preacher. A. D. F. Randolph & Co.—Lectures delivered before the Yale Divinity School are gathered into a neat book. The Rev. Dr. Howard Crosby spoke in his introductory lecture on the physical prerequisites in a candidate for the ministry. For a weak-bodied man to undertake the duties of a preacher seems to him a tempting of Providence. A sound body is necessary to a sound mind, and in a preacher the mind should be characterized by acuteness of perception, sound judgment and industry. He must have both general knowledge and argumentative power. He is no popular harangue or lyceum lecturer. The hearing of preaching is not to produce the same effect with the reading of a book, or with the performance of an actor. The pious preacher who has no psychical qualifications is a mere book, and often a book poorly printed; while the fluent and attractive orator who has no piety, no spiritual qualifications, is a mere actor. The true preacher is not to be confounded with either of these, and yet it must be said that the Church abounds with incompetent men. Many of the facts of stagnation or decay in the Church may be traced to a false conception of what a preacher should be.

—A Respectable Family. Donnelley, Gassette & Lloyd, Chicago.—A firm of Chicago publishers intend to encourage home talent by the issue of a series of original romances by American writers, presumably as yet unknown to fame. Hay Thompson is the author of "A Respectable Family." Jones, a rough backwoodsman, makes a fortune, and his family come up in the world without being able to make much change either in his manners or speech. But he is of the rough-diamond variety. Gilbert A. Pierce is the author of "Zachariah, the Congressman," a tale of American society. The member from a very hackle district makes, in Washington, the acquaintance of Barnacastle, a man with a talent for borrowing money, and with other vices equally detestable. The brief glory of a Congressman's career is shown. Peggy, the rustic love of Zachariah, is disdained by him for a time, but a visit to Europe and a sojourn in Rome develope in her propensities alarmingly like those seen in Vinnie Reem; she paints a portrait of the President from photographs, and, of course, immediately emerges into a fame which astounds the fickleheaded Zachariah.

—Our Homes. Presley Blakiston, Philadelphia.—The new handy volume of the American Health Primers is by Dr. Henry Hartshorne. The situation, construction, lighting, and warming of dwellings occupy his first attention. As to the last, warming as well as cooking by means of gas, he holds, will become common in our houses. Many years ago he proposed, in a communication to the Franklin Institute, warming and cooking by means of pure hydrogen gas conveyed through pipes separate from those of gas used for illumination. It has the advantage of giving off much heat in proportion to its volume, while ordinary burning gas produces also carbonic acid, carbonic oxide, and sulphurous acid, besides other deleterious substances contained in it before burning, which may escape through leakage. Should coal become more dear, or a very cheap process for making pure hydrogen be invented, the hydrogen stove may perhaps yet come into vise. The gas-stove will assist in ventilation. Water supply, drainage, disinfection, population, and the homes of working men are further subjects which Dr. Hartshorne notices briefly.

—Our Indian Wards. Robert Clarke & Co.—George W. Manypenny was Commissioner of Indian Affairs from March, 1853, until March, 1857, and Chairman of the Sioux Commission of 1872. His book is an exhaustive review of the history of the dealings of the white race with the red in North America down to the present day, and occupies an octavo of 436 pages. Great moderation characterizes his method, but the general bearing of the history is strongly adverse to the white race in its relation to the uncivilized and semi-civilized tribes. Summing up the facts ascertainable regarding the late outbreak of the Utes, Mr. Manypenny remarks concerning the efforts now being made by interested parties to remove the Indians from Colorado: "In this the Government should move slowly and provide in advance a suitable tract of land where these people can by cultivation of the soil make their own support. The Government should not act prematurely because of the unreasonable and imperious demands of the Governor of Colorado, backed by the Senators and Representatives from that State, or be swayed by the pressing clamor of the hosts of men who have interests in the mines there, re-echoed by other hosts who stand ready to enter into the Ute country. The Ute mind should be reached; * * * they should have assured to them a perfect title to the home to which they may be transplanted, and, in addition, a fair money consideration." Mr. Manypenny reviews damagingly the financial management of Army officers of the highest grade in their disbursement of funds appropriated for the Indians.

—Dickens's Dictionary of the Thames. Charles Dickens, London.—Works like this and the companion "Dictionary of London" give some idea of the vastness of that complexus of cities and towns which is called London. Mr. Dickens states that his object is to give practical information to oarsmen, yachtsmen, and others who turn to the river for their amusement, to furnish a book of reference for residents and a useful hand-book for those connected with the port of London and its trade. Some attempt has been made to give life to a naturally dry subject, and while Mr. Dickens is far from treating the Thames as one might who made the river a hobby and a subject for curious and loving comment, his more practical style makes the book useful in general. While the majority of articles are simple statements of fact, as in ordinary guide-books, new and interesting articles are not wanting. "Etymology of the Thames" covers more than two pages of fine print. The name of the River Thames is purely Celtic:

"It has been the custom of Saxon or Anglo-Saxon philologists, who ignore the Celtic as an essential component of the English language, to trace the word Thames to a combination of 'Tame' and 'Isis' without, however, accounting in any degree for the etymology of either of these two words. 'Tame' is the Celtic Teow, which signifies to empty, to pour out, to drain—a very excellent description of a great stream—and 'Isis' is redupli. cation of isi, the first syllable of eiswa, whence we that in this combination the word Thames would simply signify 'Taomuis,' the French Tamise—the 'pouring out of the waters.'"

Maps of the river in short sections are printed in the text from time to time.

—Treatise on Oral Deformities. D. Appleton & Co.—If anything were needed to show the extraordinary development of the science of dentistry in the United States, this extensive treatise would do it. Dr. Norman W. Kingsley writes on the general subject as a branch of mechanical surgery, and therefore includes dentistry proper as a mere adjunct to his scheme. Many of the processes by which diseases of the mouth are cured or eccentricities remedied are inventions of his own. "When I began practice on certain specialties herein treated, I was obliged to invent nearly every process that I used." Numerous illustrations give the operator a clear idea of the original and borrowed methods. Part I. relates to irregularities of the teeth, Part II. to defects of the palate, Part III. to fractures of the jaws, and Part IV. to the mechanism of speech. Final chapters treat on the æsthetics of dentistry, a curious term to be found in such a book, but one entirely justified by the text. While treating of the palate, Dr. Kingsley explains the nasal drawl of the "Yankee." It is essential to the perfection of human speech that the nasal passage for the outflow of sound should at certain times be completely shut off, and all the sound directed through the mouth. If in such cases there be any escape of sound behind the curtain of the palate, the purity of speech is destroyed. The soft palate in conjunction with the muscular wall of the upper throat cavity must be under active control. The nasal twang of the "Yankee" is entirely owing to an inaction of these two organs. This is not owing in any sense to a deformity, but rather to a lazy habit of speech, imitated by children and confirmed as the normal condition of speech of a whole community.

—The Master of Red Leaf. E. J. Hale & Son.—While the Northern view of the South is being presented in novels like a "Fool's Errand," the South retaliates in kind, although with less skill. Elizabeth Avery Meriwether appears to have found a publisher in London before getting one in New-York. Considering the large audience which she must find in the South, it is a pity that she has not more art in defending the ideas of that part of the Union. The story is told by a New-England woman in the South, who is represented as a fanatic of the John Brown sect. The unnatural position Mrs. Meriwether is under makes her put in the mouth of this young woman some very extraordinary statements. New-England and Pennsylvania are not spared.

"'This increasing bitterness,' said the Master, with a still deeper sigh, as if the sore spot were deeper probed, 'the utter blindness of New-England to any and every good quality we may possess, her malicious distortion of our bad qualities, are indeed ominous signs of the future. New-England possesses many advantages over the South, and she uses them most ungenerously. She has the ear of the world; she has nothing to do but run manufacturing mills and printing-presses, and she uses the one power to impoverish the South and the other to malign. The South is an agricultural country, she runs neither mills nor printing-presses; she eats her bread by the sweat of her brow, from the soil of her land, she is voiceless to defend herself against the defamations of her enemies. And the worst of it is, continued the Master after a pause, 'the virus of New-England hate, like some hideous cancer, is fast spreading from the East to the West.'

"'Rather,' said the Master, in that gentle, persuasive tone, the sweetness of which no other masculine voice ever equaled, 'call it desire for gain; greed of gain is a lesser curse than money to apply to that primal cause. The institution of slavery is the superficial cause. Slavery was seized by New-England as a club with which to crush us, was held up as a crime to render us odious to the outside world.'"

Here is a Yankee who explains the cause of the war to have consisted in the love of New-England for filthy lucre. But neither Southerners nor Northerners are described with much closeness to reality; they are distorted figures used to express the hatred and contempt of the writer. In better hands the same materials might have been worked into something really telling.

—Lamartine and his Friends. G. P. Putnam's Sons.—Lamartine was the idol of young Frenchmen until the rise of the turbulent Romantic school dubbed him an old fogy. This account of his personality and writings, translated by Maria E. Odell, is written by a living French author, who has preserved his first impressions of admiration for Lamartine. Henri de Lacretelle was living with his parents at Macon, the birthplace of Lamartine, when that princely poet came to visit the elder Lacretelle.

"'My father was walking in the curves of Bel-Air one afternoon in Autumn, when the name of Lamartine resounded through the house. I remember the day that my mother smiled, while I felt myself growing pale. * * * From my early college days I had bowed in admiration before two idols—Lamartine and Hugo. * * * Lamartine must have been about 40 years of age. He still preserved that well-known slender form which accorded so well with the purity and nectareous of his features. His manly and gentle face, with its finely-carved features, stood out like marble. * * * By his dress and attitude one could easily tell that a part of his time was spent on horseback. He was fending a great ash-tree which had followed him, like faithful friend, I heard of that delicious voice, which was soon from the tribune and sink into the hearts of the people, was the same of his dog, Fido."

Henri de Lacretelle, therefore, saw him in 1830, after the publication of his two "Méditations," and before his celebrated journey in the Orient, where his princely estate imposed on the imaginations of Eastern potentates as much as on the Western rubes. Two years subsequent he saw near Lamartine came to the present epoch; he was still living in 1869. After the coup d'état he retired from active politics, and in 1867 received a pension from Napoleon III. The original of this volume was published at Paris in 1872.

—Moths.—J. B. Lippincott & Co.—The popular writer of romances who calls herself "Ouida" remains true to her name and true to her first style as we found it in novels like "Granville De Vigne" and "Idalia." The style is that of the society-heroin, dear to shopgirls, being interlarded with French phrases, which, as years have gone on, and the author has really learned to know cities and men, are brought in with more appropriateness than in the old days. Lady Dolly is a young widow who has lived a very strait-laced life with her husband in an English rural neighborhood, and uses her freedom to become a woman of the world in Paris, leaving her only daughter, Vere, in charge of her grandmother. When Vere insists upon seeing her mother, she does not know what to make of her frskiness, nor does the mother know what to do with Vere. However, she worries her into a marriage with a Russian Prince, who is Moss to an almost Byronic degree, and Vere becomes one of those cold, statuesque, suffering heroines who represent, with Ouida, the quintessence of tragedy. The first impression of "Moths" is not so bad, but it degenerates soon into a weariness of words, notwithstanding a certain undeniable air of cleverness.

—Brain Work and Overwork. Presley Blakiston.—Dr. H. C. Wood, Clinical Professor of Nervous Diseases in the University of Pennsylvania, writes this number of the "American Health Primers." He thinks there is some foundation for the belief that the exigencies of modern life are producing an ever-increasing amount of nervous diseases, although statistics do not support him. Reliable statistics are wanting, at least for America, and the figures given for England are open to criticism. It may be that nervous diseases seem more frequent, only because we recognize them more clearly than did our fathers, yet the English statistics, which seem to prove that nervous diseases are not on the increase, do not take into consideration persons who are ill, but persons who have died. Life-long nervous diseases are, therefore, unrepresented. He inveighs against sudden changes of habit, and instances a night spent in a forest in camp under a pile of blankets. He was shivering with cold. A guide some yards off rose from the damp ground where he had spent the night entirely unprotected, except by his cotton shirt and pantaloons, and, looking at his coat hanging in the tree overhead, said: "I'll be gol darned if I'll wear a coat cold enough last night to put one's coat on." As to alcohol in small amounts it is an arterial and cerebral stimulant; in large quantities it paralyzes both brain and heart. Tippling and gluttony, the over-use of tobacco, coffee, and tea, and sexual excess are considered from the same cautious and sober stand-point, not denounced, but their evil effects fully stated.

"Sleeplessness is a very common indication of overwork, which, when pronounced, demands medical advice. Of still more importance are the following manifestations, and the only counsel I can give those who suffer from them is to lose no time in writing for help at once that best medical attention. Such are numbness in one or more of the extremities, permanent slight loss of control over some groups of muscles, momentary loss of consciousness, failure of memory, or loss of the power of fixing the attention. In some cases the forewarnings consist simply of momentary losses of power in the arms or legs."

THE NEW MANHATTAN MARKET.

A large meeting of property-owners in the vicinity of West Thirty-fourth-street was held in the Manhattan Market at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, to take some action in regard to the opening of the new market, which is announced for next month. Among the prominent gentlemen present were Morris K. Beer, William H. Webb, James K. Jessup, George Moore, Andrew Ward. George Moore, President of the West Side Bank, was called to the chair. He announced that the object of the meeting was to second the efforts of the Metropolitan Market Company in the establishment of an up-town market. Mr. Charles P. Palmer, President of the Metropolitan Company, made a long address. He said the management of the company had received in its endeavor to bring into closer contact the large consumers and the producers would be exemplified next week by an advertisement giving the names of all parties who have agreed to cooperate with the managers. This list would be that of a trade in itself. He was thoroughly satisfied that those dealers now opposed to the market would, so soon as they saw the success of the opening, at once apply for stands, instead of waiting to be solicited. Mr. Palmer read several reports from the managers of surface railroads and officers of the Jersey City ferries, showing that the new market would be ample facilities for the transport of goods. W. H. Webb suggested that as the property-owners were to be greatly benefited by the success of the new market, they should put their shoulders to the wheel, and aid the enterprise not only by words, but deeds, and he moved that a fund be started to properly advertise the new market in the interest of the property-owners. Andrew Ward seconded the motion, and quite a large fund was raised on the spot. After some discussion in regard to the opening of Twelfth-avenue from Twenty-third to Forty-second-street, it was decided that steps to that end should be taken at once, and the meeting adjourned.

THE O'LEARY BELT CONTEST.

Another meeting of the walkers who intend to compete for the O'Leary belt, now in the possession of "Nic" Murphy, was held yesterday afternoon in Madison-Square Garden. Bryan McSwyny was chosen to preside, and 15 of the pedestrians were present or represented by proxies. It was decided to employ two managers for the contest, each to receive $200 for his services. Several candidates were balloted for, and the majority voted for Charles Colvin and Chapman McIlvaney, who were empowered to appoint the necessary force of doorkeepers. J. Wood, of New-Jersey, asked permission to withdraw from the contest, on the ground that his sister is in a dying condition. After a great deal of talk touching the matter, a majority of the other competitors decided to accede to the request, a motion to return Wood's $500 to him. The pedestrians will meet on Saturday to draw lots for tents.

AN ASSESSMENT VACATED.

The work of regulating, grading, paving, and flagging Manhattan-street was done under the direction of the Treasurer of the Department of Parks. John H. Sereven, as owner of property upon the street, petitioned the Supreme Court to vacate the assessment levied upon him, on the grounds that the Commissioners of the Department of Parks were charged with the duty of directing the manner in which the work should be performed, and that they could not delegate their authority. The City claimed that as the acts of their Treasurer were approved by the Park Commissioners, the latter officers had really directed the work in accordance with law. Judge Lawrence, in Supreme Court Chambers, yesterday vacated the assessment, holding that the Park Commissioners did delegate their power without authority of law.

THURSDAY, April 1—P. M.

The stock speculation was decidedly strong to-day, with an upward tendency to prices. In the early dealings the advance ranged from ¼ to 2¼ ₱ cent., Western Union, Erie, Pacific Mail, Central Pacific, Lake Shore, Michigan Central, and Union Pacific being most conspicuous in the improvement. The break in the elevated railroad shares during the afternoon had a depressing influence on values, and caused a reaction of ¼ to 2 ₱ cent. In the final dealings however, a firmer tone prevailed, and there was a recovery of ¼ to 1½ ₱ cent from the lowest point. The decline in the elevated railroad stocks was due to reports that the Manhattan Company had submitted a proposition to the Directors of the two elevated roads asking the latter to agree to a reduction in the dividends. Metropolitan fell off 12½ ₱ cent., Manhattan 7½ ₱ cent, and New-York 4½ ₱ cent, but the two first named closed at a recovery of 1 ₱ cent. The Granger shares were very firmly held, and recorded only slight fluctuations. The advance in the trunk line stocks was based on favorable reports in regard to the earnings of the various companies. Investment shares were firm and in good demand. Among the miscellaneous shares, Nashville and Chattanooga rose 4½ ₱ cent., but later lost most of the improvement.

The transactions aggregated 243,820 shares, including 48,600 Erie, 45,725 Manhattan, 18,200 Pacific Mail, 16,800 New-York Central, 12,600 Metropolitan, 9,100 Union Pacific, 8,600 Wabash, 8,100 Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, 7,400 Michigan Central, 6,800 Lake Shore, 6,000 Nashville and Chattanooga, 5,900 Western Union, 5,200 St. Paul, and 5,100 Northern Pacific.

North-west common sold at 96⅝@96⅞; preferred at 110½; St. Paul at 82⅝@83⅛; preferred at at 105@105⅜; Lake Shore advanced from 109½ to 109⅞, declined to 109, and closed at 109¼; Michigan Central rose from 93½ to 94¼, fell off to 93⅛, and finally sold at 93½; Canada Southern advanced from 66⅝ to 67¼; Erie rose from 45⅝ to 46½, reacted to 45⅞, and closed at 46; the preferred fell off from 70½ to 70; Delaware, Lackawanna and Western rose to 94⅝, and declined to 93⅝; Delaware and Hudson rose to 86½, and reacted to 86; New-Jersey Central advanced to 85⅝, and fell off to 84⅝; Reading sold at 70⅞@70⅝; Morris and Essex at 108; New Central Coal at 35; Pacific Mail advanced to 45⅛; Ontario declined to 74; St. Paul and Minneapolis fell off to 58⅛ and rose to 58⅝; St. Paul and Sioux City advanced to 45, and later sold at 44¼; Hannibal and St. Joseph rose to 37¼ and preferred to 72¼, with closing sales at 36⅞ and 71⅛, respectively; Houston and Texas advanced to 33, and fell off to 31½; Lake Erie and Western sold at 35@35⅞; Cedar Falls declined to 24½ and rallied to 24¾; Ontario and Western sold at 26⅝@27; Indianapolis, Bloomington and Western advanced from 52 to 55; Kansas and Texas advanced from 44¼ to 45⅜, and reacted to 44½; Nashville and Chattanooga advanced from 61 to 34½, and reacted to 61; Northern Pacific declined from 31¼ to 30, and preferred from 53½ to 52⅝; Ohio and Mississippi rose from 38⅛ to 39, and reacted to 38½; Wabash rose from 44½ to 44⅞, and preferred from 69¼ to 70, closing at 44⅜ for the former and at 69⅝ for the latter; St. Louis and San Francisco fell off from 41 to 40½, do. preferred selling at 59@59½; Iron Mountain rose from 55⅝ to 56, fell off to 55⅝, and closed at 55⅞; Union Pacific advanced from 80½ to 91⅛, and closed at 90⅝; Central Pacific rose from 78¼ to 80; Pacific Mail advanced from 41⅞ to 42¼, reacted to 41⅞, rose to 43⅛, fell off to 42¼, and closed at 42½; Manhattan Elevated declined from 32⅝ to 32, rose to 32⅞, broke to 25⅝, and closed at 26¾; Metropolitan dropped from 105½ to 93, and rallied to 94; New-York declined

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS.

The date printed on the wrapper of each paper denotes the time when the subscription expires.

The Signal Service Bureau report indicates for to-day, in this region, clear or partly cloudy weather, westerly winds, backing to south-easterly, stationary or higher temperature, rising followed by falling barometer.

In March, 1879, there was an increase of $892,000 in the amount of the public debt; in March, 1880, the debt has been reduced $14,719,000. The difference between the financial condition of the Government then and now is due to an increase for the month of seven millions, or over 50 per cent., in the Customs receipts, to an increase of two millions, or 27 per cent., in the receipts from internal revenue, to an increase of twelve hundred thousand from miscellaneous sources, and to a decrease of four millions in expenditures. Gratifying as the figures are, they indicate an enormous expansion of imports, very largely of articles of luxury, and a rapid increase in the consumption of liquors and tobacco, both of which are significant of extravagant and unproductive expenditure among all classes of the people. Since April, 1872, there has been no such reduction of the debt from current revenue as has taken place during the month just closed, and though the Treasury is in a much stronger condition than it was then, the standing menace to the permanence of resumption assumes fresh significance from the increase of the reserve of silver dollars to $29,000,000. Some $800,000 of these coins were put in circulation last month, but as three times that amount was coined, the prospect of adding, during the next nine months, another 300 tons of 88-cent dollars to the hoard already in the Treasury vaults is not inspiriting.

Mr. EDMUNDS made a very adroit and in one sense, though it changed no votes, a very effective, speech yesterday against the House amendment to the Deficiency bill, and the other Republican Senators sensibly allowed this speech to stand as their protest, and contented themselves with voting against the bill as amended. The Senator from Vermont prudently avoided placing any special emphasis on the character of the amendment as a rider to an appropriation bill. His criticism of the amendment was severe, and in some respects just, but we do not anticipate the difficulty in its execution which he fears. There is scarcely reason for doubt that the Judges in whose hands it rests will construe it so as to give it effect. The sweeping condemnation of Judicial appointments of executive officers has some force, but it is as well to remember that the original law provides for the appointment of the Supervisors of Elections, the principal officers under the laws, by the Circuit Judges, and that these appointees shall be of different political parties. The objection that the Circuit Courts will not be in session falls, because the law requires them to be so, or else to designate District Judges to perform the duty of appointment, and these can as readily appoint the Special Deputies designated under the amendment. Mr. EDMUNDS's argument was, on the whole, more brilliant than sound, and it is a pity that it got no better reply than the vulgar and maudlin one offered by Senator EATON.

The House Committee on Territories have summarily killed the ridiculous bill to organize a full-fledged Territorial Government for Alaska. If the 550 white people who live in that district should insist on having the Territorial officers appointed from the local population, as many citizens of Territories have insisted, there would not be anybody left to govern. Everybody would be a member of the Government. A much more sensible plan for the government of the Territory contemplates the establishment of three judicial courts, which shall have jurisdiction of probate and testamentary matters, as well as of civil and criminal proceedings. The complaint has been that there is no civil authority in Alaska. The authority of the courts will do for a beginning, and if the administration of law encourages the settlement of the country, more government can be provided.

Mr. JOHN D. LAWSON, who has been nominated for State Superintendent of Insurance, is a perfectly honest man and an ardent Republican, but possesses, so far as the public have had an opportunity to judge, no special fitness for the position. From that rather limited circle within which is confined all the capacity for public affairs recognized by Gov. CORNELL, a better choice could hardly have been made. From the somewhat larger area of talent and special capacity recognized by the party and the public, a much more suitable nominee could readily have been selected. Since, under the present administration of State affairs, the essential qualification for public office seems to be that the nominee shall be a personal friend and adherent of the Governor, there will be abundant reason for thankfulness if all the appointments are as respectable as that of Mr. LAWSON.

The trenchant vigor of the criticisms made by Mr. BLISS upon the New-York charter amendments is as refreshing as the biting sarcasm which gave point to his allusions to the petty jobbery of legislation which takes care of the interests of "CHARLEY" BLACKIE and protects the emoluments of "JAKE" PATTERSON. There are certain champions of the bill in the Senate who may not have much character to lose or a very extended political future to sacrifice, but members of Assembly like Mr. VARNUM, who has an honorable record behind him and a future of great promise before him, can hardly afford to have their names identified with any such scheme of spoliation and fraud. The protests against the amendments gather volume with every opportunity that is given for their utterance, and the most purblind of political managers must begin to see that the swindle attempted on the public will, if carried out, be attended by crushing party disaster. The amendments cannot be too soon amended out of existence.

MR. SHERMAN'S SPEECH.

The Secretary of the Treasury has seen fit to make a formal opening of his campaign for the Presidential nomination at his home in Ohio. In his speech at Mansfield, on Tuesday evening, he frankly stated his desire to be nominated, though he protested that his name had been "mentioned" "by the course of recent events, and not by his own seeking." By what mental juggle Mr. SHERMAN reconciles this statement with facts which are well known to the public, we cannot presume to say. Politics, like society, seems to have a language of its own, and it would, perhaps, be unkind to hold Mr. SHERMAN to the literal meaning of his words. He doubtless deems himself innocent of explicit misrepresentation, and, if the question of his sincerity related only to this bit of stump clap-trap, we might very well afford to dismiss it with the reflection that he comes as near telling the truth as most politicians would in the same circumstances. Unfortunately for him and for the country, however, this is not the whole of the question. Mr. SHERMAN's name is not only mentioned by his own "seeking," but he has for a long time repeatedly and extensively abused the high office which he holds, in order to gratify his personal ambition. Of the truth of this statement we have been compelled from time to time to publish the most convincing evidence. As we regard the purity and dignity of the public service, and especially of the department which Mr. SHERMAN controls, as more important than the reputation of any, even the most prominent, Republican leader, we have felt called upon to give these facts to the country. That they show a condition of things highly discreditable to the Secretary of the Treasury, and that they reflect directly upon the party which has so long and so greatly honored him, we regret keenly. But the duty was not the less plain and imperative. And now that Mr. SHERMAN appears of his own motion to present his claims to promotion to a position of infinitely greater importance than his present one, his past infidelity to the requirements of his trust cannot be brushed aside with a hypocritical phrase. Mr. SHERMAN is as blind as a bat to those principles of a reform of the civil service which his official chief professes, and that is of itself a grave disqualification for a Presidential candidate. But quite independently of any improvement of the service, there is an old-fashioned standard of decency and honor in the administration of the Treasury, which dates from the time of HAMILTON, and which he has disregarded with cynical indifference.

In so far as concerns the statement by Mr. SHERMAN of the general features of the political situation, and of the issues which will come before the people at the next election, it is rather vague and not particularly forcible, but it is sound enough. The Republican Party, he says, "proposes now to maintain the policy of resumption and refunding which has been so successfully executed thus far, but must be supported hereafter by the friendly action of the Government." The Secretary of the Treasury may fairly be pardoned for the indirect praise imputed to himself in this statement, for he merits it. The resumption policy owes its success very largely—after what is due to bad crops abroad and an influx of gold—to the way in which it has been "executed" by the Treasury Department. The policy as it is defined by the three laws which relate to it—the act of 1875, the act of 1878, and the Silver Coinage act—might very easily, had these been literally interpreted, have failed completely. Mr. SHERMAN's entirely justifiable but still somewhat arbitrary determination to let the silver dollars accumulate in the vaults, and to redeem in gold only, saved the country from a fatal miscarriage of resumption. And he undoubtedly refers to a continuance of this course, with the sanction ultimately of Congressional action, when he states the necessity of "friendly" support by the Government. We have little doubt, judging him by his past course, that in whatever station he may be found, he will not consent to the overthrow of resumption; and that he will sooner or later advocate and labor for the measures necessary to maintain it, whether or not these should include the repeal of the silver law and the retirement of the legal tenders. He is not a man to "take" an obstacle to his policy fairly, like a courageous rider to the hounds. He prefers to go with the crowd for the nearest easy leap; but he does not turn back, and he is bound to be in at the death. Considering the fluctuating and unformed public opinion which has prevailed in regard to the finances for the last ten years, there is a sense in which these qualities have been of great value to the country, and though we have held that a clearer, more direct, and bolder course would have determined public opinion, and would have saved much of the costly experience to which the country has been subjected, it is but just to admit that Mr. SHERMAN has rendered substantial services in the triumph, so far as it has been obtained, of sound finance. In the same way, which we do not regard as the best way, or as that of the highest statesmanship, he may be counted on to render like service in the future. And no one can deny that, under his leadership, or that of any possible Republican candidate for the Presidency, the finances would be infinitely safer than with the Democratic Party in complete possession of the Government.

Mr. SHERMAN's references to the Southern question are void of any special significance. They were confined to a general statement of the danger to equal rights from the domination of a party which embraces the authors of the Southern outrages, and which regards the constitutional changes resulting from the war either with indifference or with positive hatred. His statement that "every citizen of the United States, in the South as in the North, must be secure in the enjoyment of civil and political rights, and every power of the National Government must be exercised to this end," is a fair one. It would have been interesting to have had from him some explanation of what powers the National Government can exercise in this direction not already provided for by law, and what the Government has done, or can do, under these powers, to secure the object which he defines. There is a well-founded impression in the Republican Party that the Administration of which Mr. SHERMAN is the chief member has failed signally to do what could and ought to be done for the security of equal rights, and that impression is not favorable to the selection of Mr. SHERMAN as a Presidential candidate. There is, moreover, an indirect way of aiding in the accomplishment of this object. It is to build up the Republican Party in the South by the pure and judicious use of the appointing power. On this point also the record of Mr. SHERMAN is not calculated to inspire confidence. It must, on the contrary, excite indignation and distrust.

A SMALL GAME IN A LITTLE STATE.

Rhode Island and Delaware enjoy a distinction of which they will probably never be deprived. It is a heritage derived from their good fortune in belonging to the original band of thirteen British colonies. They are, and will doubtless always remain, the smallest of the sisterhood of States. Rhode Island has more United States Senators to the square mile than any other State can hope to have, and Delaware chooses her State officers with the smallest number of votes of any of the mature Commonwealths. While her population is to that of New-York very nearly as one to thirty-five, her Electoral vote is to that of the Empire State as three to thirty-five. In these little States, a small number of votes have a relatively great value. Rhode Island, as is well known, imposes a slight property qualification upon naturalized citizens. The Democratic Convention recently held at Providence was in a denunciatory mood, and it opened the bottles of its wrath with peculiar vehemence upon this restriction of the sacred right to vote. The fact that the mill operatives of foreign birth and the greenest arrivals from other lands could not cast their ballots on equal terms with the natives was represented as an outrage of enormous proportions, resulting in all manner of corruption and misgovernment. But in Rhode Island this restriction upon the suffrage has at least the sanction of the Constitution and the laws, and several times, when a proposition to remove it has been submitted to the legal voters of the State, it has been defeated by a decisive majority.

In the little New-England State the presumption is that the disfranchised citizens yearn to vote the Democratic ticket. Hence these fierce denunciations. But the Democrats of Delaware have been engaged in an effort to disfranchise large numbers of citizens who are fully entitled to the suffrage under the Constitution and the laws, but are guilty of a desire to vote for Republican candidates. This, of course, makes a vast difference, and no Democratic convention, solicitous for the rights of the people, will be found denouncing the outrage, though it involves actual trickery and fraud and not a constitutional defect. The Democratic Party is evidently anxious about the three Electoral votes of the little State of Delaware, and pursuing the tactics, which appear to have been deliberately adopted, of securing every possible advantage by any disreputable means that may give promise of success, they set out early to make that State sure. Delaware has a goodly contingent of colored voters, and as the fifteenth amendment to the Federal Constitution stands in the way of their direct disfranchisement, her lawmakers some years ago resorted to a device for circumventing its prohibitions. They made the exercise of the privilege of voting as difficult as they well could, especially for the poor and the ignorant, and put it in the power of certain officers to increase the difficulty almost at will. In order to vote, the citizen must be assessed for a tax, must make payment thereof, and must take his receipt with him to the polls. Unless his name is on the assessment list by the 1st of April he cannot vote in November, and unless he pays his tax within a certain time he can neither vote that year nor be assessed the next.

This law was intended to discourage and diminish the colored vote, and in the hands of Democratic officers it has been found a very effective instrument of disfranchisement. This year it was intended to make it do yeoman's service for the party. It is the business of Assessors ordinarily to see that citizens subject to taxation are duly assessed, and even in Delaware they are understood to take an oath to perform that duty faithfully; but they really make it their business first to find out how citizens intend to vote, and then, if they approve of their intentions, to place their names on the list, but otherwise to leave them off. They set out upon this game in January in lively style. Thousands of Republicans were allowed to go unassessed, and no appeal would induce the Assessors to subject them to the burden of taxation. There were certain days in February on which the assessment lists were subject to revision, and citizens could apply to have their names put on. But every possible obstacle was put in the way, the work was done with vexatious delay, and many voters still lacked the evidence of their right required by the State. Still there was an appeal to the Levy Court of the County, but there, too, Democracy presided, and no time was given to this business that could be taken up in any other way, and then it was used as slowly and grudgingly as possible.

If many Republicans do not remain disfranchised, it is due to an early discovery of the Democratic trick and the zealous activity of a few men, who have exerted themselves to make the assessment as complete as practicable. The Delaware Democrats counted on escaping Federal supervision on the plea that their assessment arrangement was not a registration of voters, but the matter was carried before the United States Circuit Court, and Judge BRADFORD decided that it was just that and nothing else, and supervisors were appointed to be present at the revisions of the lists, both by the Assessors and the Levy Courts. This has been a serious check on the proposed fraud, and it is just possible that the registration of Republicans has been made somewhere near complete. Another anomaly in Delaware taxation is a difficulty in paying taxes as well as being assessed, for that, too, is a necessary preliminary to voting. The curious spectacle is presented of "dodging" on the part of the Collector instead of the taxpayer, and a poor colored Republican often finds it extremely difficult to get that officer to accept his poll-tax and give him a receipt for it. This whole miserable business is a game to keep the State in the hands of the Democrats, even though a majority of the voters might prove to be Republicans. It is of a piece with the trickery resorted to elsewhere for the same purpose, and it is in the State where the courtly, the cultured, and the high-toned BAYARD exercises a controlling influence in the councils of his party.

COTTON MILLS IN THE COTTON STATES.

From time to time in these columns, the advantages to the South which would follow the establishment of cotton mills in that section have been very fully set forth and commented upon. But, from one cause or another, suggestions of the kind indicated seemed to have found but little favor with the capitalists of the Southern States, and even less with the poor white men and women who would in any other community have gladly hailed the opportunity of becoming mill operatives. On the one hand, the principal objection to such establishments seemed to be that they were new, untried, and might prove disastrous speculations, and on the other, it was urged against them that the work which they had to offer was fit only for "low-down Yankees," not for "the white people of the South." Still, and in spite of these and many other objections equally ridiculous, the true friends of the Southern States continued to urge the importance of establishing cotton factories in them. Persistent efforts in this direction have not been without effect. The people of Georgia, who are, beyond all comparison, the most enterprising, progressive, and wide-awake in the South, were among the first to see the profit which must surely follow the manufacture of cotton in the field which grew it, and some years ago extensive mills were erected at Columbus, Atlanta, and other points. More recently the moneyed men of South Carolina appear to have become thoroughly alive to the importance of, and the benefits to be derived from, the spread of the industry in question, and they advocated their theory to such purpose that, as appears from a recent report, there are now in the Palmetto State eighteen cotton factories having a capital of nearly three million dollars. With nearly one hundred thousand spindles and two thousand looms, these mills produce more than one hundred thousand yards of cloth, and nearly eighteen thousand pounds of yarn, in each full working day. In the same period they consume more than fifty thousand pounds of raw cotton, making an annual consumption of about seventeen million pounds, or nearly forty thousand bales. They pay $38,159 in wages, give employment to 2,612 operatives, and support nearly ten thousand people.

Contending against the most adverse circumstances—the disinclination of intelligent white people to do work which they believed to be beneath them, the lack of skilled and experienced foremen to direct the labor of the operatives, and the general dullness of trade—the South Carolina factories have for some time past been paying dividends of from 18 to 25 per cent upon the capital employed. If any additional arguments be needed to encourage the manufacture of cotton in the South, they can be found in the fact that by them work and bread is given to white women and children who could find no other labor so well suited to their strength, and which yields them so large an income. Again, as must be sufficiently apparent to the most casual student of the subject, the entire profit upon cotton manufactured in the South, from the time it is gathered in the raw state from the field until it passes over the counter of the shopkeeper, in one form or another, goes to the people. Heretofore the Southern States have supplied to both Old and New England the raw material upon which their industries largely depended, and then in a manufactured state have, at high prices and in a manufactured form, bought that material back again. If the industry which has developed in Georgia and South Carolina within a comparatively recent date goes on increasing, this state of things must of necessity be changed. The pound of raw cotton, which was formerly worth only ten cents in South Carolina, is now, after having been manufactured into yarn, worth either in the South or North from twenty-two to twenty-three cents a pound. In this way, as will appear from a very simple calculation, the eighteen cotton mills now running in South Carolina keep in that State more than two million dollars which would otherwise go to manufacturers in other parts of the country.

From the prospect that the capitalists of the Southern States, seeing the advantages which are derived from the manufacture of cotton where it is grown, will go on building mills, it need not be argued that the industries of Fall River and other parts of New-England will languish or fall to the ground. There is no probability that the mills of the South will for many years to come be able to produce the finer qualities of goods now furnished by the looms of the Eastern States. The former will for many reasons be obliged to devote themselves almost exclusively to the making of coarse cloths and yarns, while the monopoly of producing the finer sorts of cloths will still be held by New-England. Meanwhile, however, and no matter what may be the result to the industries of other parts of the country, it is sufficiently obvious that from this time on the number of cotton factories in the South may be expected to increase steadily, if not with marked rapidity.

A WARNING TO PARENTS.

There seems to be little use in bewailing the circulation of vicious juvenile literature of the highwayman type. Every intelligent man admits that it does a frightful amount of harm among boys, but no one takes any effective step to check its circulation. The story which teaches boys that robbery, stealing, lying, profanity, and drunkenness are manly and noble sports does not offend against any existing statute, and Mr. COMSTOCK cannot interfere with its circulation. It is clear that if this evil is to be checked, our laws must be amended, and it is to be hoped that the recent painful incident in North Adams, Mass., which is directly traceable to the influence of demoralizing juvenile literature, will arouse a public indignation which will lead to substantial results.

The two boys who are now expiating their crime in the North Adams Jail in brown paper and sweet oil, to wit, Master Charles Briggs and Master James Plunkett, are both under fifteen years of age. It is known that for the last two years they have been in the constant habit of reading the Desperate Small-boys of America, and other story papers of like reprehensible character. Mr. Danforth, the teacher of the Lanesboro boarding-school, which these boys attended, testifies that they established an underground railway by which reams of piratical literature were smuggled into the school, and that they openly confessed that they had rather read the Desperate Small-boys than solve the most attractive problem in fractions, or bound the most abstruse South American Republic. The natural result was that a week ago they ran away. There was nothing to hinder them from walking down stairs and going out through the front door, but they preferred to tear their sheets into strips, and with the help of ropes thus extemporized, to lower themselves from the window. Their subsequent adventures are set forth in their joint confession made to Esquire Hickock, of North Adams, and will be painfully suggestive to any active fathers who may read it.

It appears that, after much debate as to what particular field of crime they should cultivate, the boys decided to become plumbers. It may seem incredible that the sons of Christian parents, educated amid the wholesome influences of the well-known Lanesboro school, should be capable of entering upon so shameless and wicked a career; but such is the consequence of the constant reading of vicious literature. Masters Briggs and Plunkett found much difficulty in obtaining the necessary tools for the prosecution of the plumber's nefarious trade, since, of course, no respectable and law-abiding mechanic will make or sell them. It is believed that the boys must have made the acquaintance of some member of the gang of plumbers that has so long infested Western Massachusetts, and that they were supplied with tools by him. At any rate, they succeeded in obtaining a portable furnace, two pairs of gas-tongs, two soldering-irons, and a supply of solder. These they concealed in their mattresses until the day, or rather the night, of their escape, and, of course, they took them with them when they fled from the school.

As both the boys lived, when they were not at school, at North Adams, they endeavored to baffle pursuit by taking the road from Lanesboro to South Adams. They walked rapidly during the night, and at about 3 o'clock in the morning they began operations. Approaching a house in the outskirts of South Adams, they concealed themselves until the man of the house had gone to his work. They then boldly entered the house, and confronting the man's wife, informed her that they were plumbers, and intended to put the kitchen boiler in order. The terrified woman made no resistance, and the young criminals went into the kitchen and severed the connection between the boiler and the range. Master Briggs then informed her that he would have to go to the shop for tools, and accordingly departed, leaving her under the guard of Master Plunkett. An hour later he returned, having spent the time in selecting other houses in which to consummate plumbing outrages. The boys then replaced the boiler, scattered a great deal of melted solder, and made out a bill, in which $2 was charged for repairing the boiler, $4 for their time, $2 50 for materials, and $2 for the job. This bill, amounting in all to $12 50, was paid by their victim, and they then departed, exulting over the success of their first crime.

Seven other houses were visited by these desperadoes, and their booty amounted to nearly seventy dollars. At the seventh house, however, they were overtaken by justice. A report that two young, but peculiarly bold and reckless, plumbers were devastating South Adams reached the authorities of North Adams, and came to the knowledge of the parents of the boys. It was immediately suspected that the two boys who had just run away from the Lanesboro school were the ruffians in question, and a strong force of Police was immediately sent to the scene of their depredations. The two juvenile plumbers were surrounded in the house of Edward S. Foote, Esq., and arrested while they were in the very act of knocking holes in his bath-tub, and were exercising a brutal terrorism over the Foote family. The boys were taken to North Adams and securely lodged in the jail, where, after an interview with their parents, who are exceptionally athletic men, they made a confession, but without showing any signs of penitence. Apparently, they have no conception of the enormity of their crime, and it is feared that if they are released they will seize the first opportunity to resume the infamous career which the Police fortunately interrupted.

Such an illustration of the results of reading vicious literature ought to arouse all parents and philanthropists to a determined effort to stamp out the demoralizing publications which teach our children to regard robbers and plumbers as heroes worthy of admiration, and lead them to emulate the exploits of the wretches of whom they read.

The managers of the New-York Diet Kitchen Association appeal to the public interest and support, as will be seen by reference to the advertising columns of THE TIMES, through an entertainment which they will offer at Lyric Hall to-day and to-morrow. This entertainment takes the pleasant form of a children's merry-making, and is specially appropriate at this festive Easter season. The afternoons are dedicated to the children, and are crowded with various enticing amusements, while the evenings offer attractions to children of larger growth. Such good work have these unobtrusive Diet Kitchens done, that an eminent physician of this City has said that he should be glad to see "one-half of the drug stores and all of the liquor-shops turned into diet kitchens." And he adds: "The question of food should be the first, where it is generally the last consideration." The association now three kitchens in different parts of the City, to whose operation is largely due the diminished suffering and mortality of the last year among the poor. The managers wish to secure funds for keeping these open during the approaching hot weather, and they make this appeal for sympathy and recognition, to which the generous public of New-York should not be slow to respond.

The "Krepost" (fortress) of St. Petersburg, which has lately been turned into a prison for suspected Nihilists, is virtually the historical centre of the city. On the marshy islet which it occupies, between the Great and Little Neva, PETER the Great built with his own hands the first house of his new capital, which is still preserved. In the fortress church, whose tall gold-plated spire can be seen miles up the river, lie all the Romanoff Czars except PETER II., who is buried at Moscow. The underground dungeons have held many famous State prisoners, including Marshal MUNNICH, his enemy, BIRON, Duke of COURLAND, and Col. HONDT, one of FREDERICK the Great's best officers. When the ice of the Neva breaks up, it is customary for the Commandant of the citadel to cross in a boat to the Winter Palace, (which is immediately opposite,) and to present a silver cup to the Czar, who gives it back to him filled with silver coins.

April, or Aprilis in Latin, gets its name, it is thought, from aperire, to open, because it is the season when the buds begin to open. It was, with the old Romans, the second month of the year, JULIUS CESSAR adding the thirtieth day to it. During the reign of NERO it was called Neronius, in honor of that monster of cruelty. In the Attodian calendar the latter part of Elaphebolion and the greater part of Munychion correspond to April. CHARLEMAGNE styled it in his new calendar Grass-month, and it is still so styled by the Netherlanders. The French revolutionists turned it into the larger portion of Germinal and the beginning of Floreal. Aprilis is portrayed on ancient monuments as a youth dancing, with a rattle in his hand. The custom of sending persons on a fruitless errand the first day of the month has been supposed to be a travesty of the sending of JESUS hither and yon from ANNAS and CAIAPHAS, and from PILATE to HEROD, because this scene in Scriptural history was made the theme of a miracle play about Easter-time in the Middle Ages. It has been referred, also to the uncertainty of the weather at this time. But, as March 25 used to be New-Year's Day, April 1 was its octave, when the gayeties and sports, in which playing tricks was prominent, culminated and ended, and so, no doubt, the custom was established. It is possible, however, that it may be a relic of some old pagan festival, and an apparent confirmation is that the Hindoos practice the same deceptions on the 31st of March, at what they designate as the Holi celebration. The effort to put people in a ridiculous position on this day is universal throughout Europe, but it is mostly confined to small towns, residents of great cities being usually too busy to spend time in fooling or trying to make fools. In New-York, for instance, April 1 often passes without any reminder of its time-honored character. One may walk down Broadway from Fifty-third street to Bowling Green without encountering a spurious parcel, a hat full of bricks, a sham rat, or any of the ancient devices for deluding the unthoughtful. If this were really All Fools' Day, and if the human family were capable of self-understanding, it would deserve wider commendation than any day of the year. Most of us would then have a personal interest in it; but, happily for our self-esteem, we never include ourselves among the fools. A man may suspect sometimes that he is far from what he should be; that he is a deceiver, a hypocrite, a reformer, a rascal, a saint, a genius, but he can never be persuaded that he is a fool, which the average man is more likely to be than anything else. All Fools' Day is a day in which our eternal egotism prevents us from supposing that we, as individuals, have the slightest concern, although it should be the universal festival of mankind.

People so fortunate, or unfortunate, as to be divorced, people who absolutely decline to take Mr. Punch's advice to those about to commit matrimony, and people who have any use for information as to the best way to get married, in short, pretty nearly every man or woman in this State will do well to pay attention to what the Court of Appeals has recently decided in the case of a certain Mr. BAKER, of Cayuga County. The reason why Mrs. BAKER procured a divorce in another State are uninteresting. But it is very much to the point to observe that the summons in the suit was served by publication, and that Mr. BAKER did not appear personally at any stage of the proceedings. He must have heard of them in some casual way, however, for he soon introduced Mrs. BAKER No. 2 to the circles which he was accustomed to grace, and he was, therefore, charged with bigamy. The plea of the Court of Appeals' decision is reported as follows: "A court of another State cannot adjudge of the dissolution of the marital relations of a citizen of this State, domiciled and actually residing here during the pendency of the judicial proceedings in such State, without a voluntary appearance on his part therein and with no actual notice to him thereof, and this although the marriage was solemnized in such other State. Such judgment of divorce cannot be pleaded as a defense to a charge of bigamy." Consequently, Mrs. BAKER No. 2 is in some doubt as to her status, Mrs. BAKER No. 1 is still a wife against her will, and Mr. BAKER is where he could the same votes in Sing Sing, unless, for reasons beyond his control, he should change his residence to Albany or Auburn. Who is really married has sometimes been placed among those things to follow one third out, and now, it seems, who is really divorced must be added to the list. If it were not absurdly unnecessary that so many important speeches should be made in Congress, there might be time to consider a national law of marriage and divorce. Until that time comes, Mr. BAKER and the two Misses BAKER will still have a monopoly of interest in what each of the courts of these 46 United States and Territories, not to mention the District of Columbia, may say upon this subject.

The Earl of DUNMORE, who has just arrived in this country, is the most eminent stock-raiser in Scotland. He only began the business some 12 years ago, but rapidly achieved an extraordinary success, as a measure due to the interests of his father-in-law, the Earl of LONGFORD, one of the renowned agriculturists, "COKE of Norfolk," as he is always called, who inherits his father's agricultural tastes and sagacities. For some years past the annual sales at Dunmore Park have been among the leading bucolic events of the year, and by his judgment and attention to this pursuit Lord DUNMORE is understood to have made a highly acceptable addition to his income. In earlier life he was in the Guards, and his good looks and attractive manners left an indelible impression on Canadian ladies when he was in the Dominion with his regiment. His mother was one of the handsome daughters of the Earl of FERMANAGH by his second wife, daughter of Prince WORONZOW, (Russian Ambassador in England,) and, consequently, sister of the lamented Lord SIDNEY HERBERT. Lord DUNMORE's uncle, Sir G. A. MURRAY, (nephew of the "Prairie Bird,") married first a sister of Gen. WADSWORTH, of Geneseo, N. Y. A few months ago Lord DUNMORE behaved with most conspicuous gallantry in rescuing several persons from drowning. A gun accident deprived him in 1871 of one of his eyes, and there were grave apprehensions, happily unfulfilled, that it might affect the other. He is probably now here on business connected with his famous herd.

It is very hard to do anything original nowadays, even in vice, which is generally far more inventive, active, and enterprising than the most renowned virtue. But something akin to originality in crime has been attempted lately in California. The proprietor of the Grand Central Hotel, at Oakland, appears, according to the local papers, to have taken charge of the house in order to carry out a scheme for robbing his patrons by wholesale. Having leased a popular fast in a central position, his object was to secure as many rich boarders as possible, and then to ascertain by the most cautious and sagacious methods where they kept their valuables. These points gained, the next step was to set fire to the house about 3 o'clock A. M., and while the guests, excited and alarmed, were leaping from their beds, intent on escape, to gather up their jewelry and other portable property and convey it to a place of safety, where, later, it might be prudently appropriated. The plan of the landlord was well conceived, and would, no doubt, have been successful had he been more attentive to details. The fire burned so slowly as to give time for the removal of most of the trunks and valises, but some of these were carried off by the landlord's dishonest agents after they had been rescued. Had the flames spread as rapidly as the incendiaries had reason to anticipate, the mortifying failure would not, probably, have taken place. The inn-keeper must not be too hastily pronounced a blunder. His crime was an experiment, as all pioneer movements are, and too much should not, therefore, have been expected of him. He is in limbo now, but if he recovers his freedom and have an opportunity to try again, he will, undoubtedly, repair some of his late errors and do the thing handsomely.

ELECTIONS IN APRIL.

CONSTITUTIONAL QUESTIONS IN INDIANA AND MICHIGAN—STATE OFFICERS AND LEGISLATURE IN RHODE ISLAND.

The people of Indiana will elect on Monday, April 5, township officers, and pass upon seven proposed amendments to the Constitution of the State, which, having passed two successive Legislatures, are now submitted to the vote of the people for final ratification or rejection. They are avowedly, as the Indianapolis Journal says, in the interest of progress and reform, and the Democratic leaders have resolved to oppose them, and, as far as possible, to draw party lines on the question of their adoption, especially of those putting a residence limit upon the voter and providing for a registration law and changing the time of the annual elections. The amendments are to the following effect: First, they require a residence of six months in the State, 60 days in the township, and 30 days in the ward or precinct as a condition to voting, and also a registration under a law to be passed by the Legislature; second, they strike out of the Constitution the words, "no negro or mulatto shall have the right of suffrage;" third, they change the time of the general elections from October to the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November; fourth, they strike the word "white" out of Sections 4 and 5 of Article 4 of the Constitution; fifth, they provide for special legislation on the subject of fees and salaries, "so as to grade the compensation of officers in proportion to the population, and the necessary services required"; sixth, they vest the judicial power of the State in a Supreme Court, Circuit Court, and such other courts as the Legislature may establish; and seventh, they limit the municipal indebtedness of counties, cities, and towns to 2 per cent on the aggregate value of the taxable property as shown by the assessments. The Indianapolis Journal claims that the proposed change in the time of the elections would result in an annual saving to the people of the State of not less than $1,000,000, and in important political benefits besides. The change puts all the elections in November except those for township officers and for Judges. The latter may be held at any time set by the Legislature, but must be for such officers only. The people can ratify or reject all of the proposed amendments or ratify some and reject others.

On the same day the people of Michigan are to vote upon two proposed amendments to their Constitution. One increases the salary of the Governor from $1,000 per year to $3,000; the other abrogates a provision of the Constitution which requires that the Legislature shall provide for at least one library in each township, and that all fines from criminal cases shall be applied to its support. The penal fines are to be applied as the Legislature may direct. The township elections and most of the charter elections in Michigan occur on the same day. The City of Detroit alone does not vote upon the question of the increase of the salary of the Governor.

The township elections in Connecticut occur on Monday, April 5.

On Wednesday, April 7, the people of Rhode Island will elect their State officers and a Legislature, which will choose a United States Senator in succession of Gen. Ambrose E. Burnside. They will also vote upon a proposed amendment to the Constitution of the State providing that hereafter a registry tax shall not be assessed, and that neither payment of such tax, nor the performance of military duty, shall be required as a qualification of an elector. For State officers, there are four tickets in the field, as follows:

Office.	Republican.	Democratic.
Governor	Alfred H. Littlefield.	Horace R. Kimball.
Lieut.-Gov.	Henry E. Fay.	Steph. F. Slocum.
Sec. State	Joshua M. Addeman.	W. A. W. Ballou.
Att'y-Gen.	Willard Sayles.	Hugh J. Carroll.
Treasurer	Samuel Clark.	Daniel S. Ford.
	Prohibitionist.

BUSINESS OF THE NATION

RIDERS FOR THE ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

THE OLD AMENDMENT OF THE EXTRA SESSION RESURRECTED—A PROTRACTED DEBATE THEREON EXPECTED.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—The House Committee on Military Affairs to-day agreed to two propositions and decided to offer them as amendments to the Army Appropriation bill, when that bill is taken up for consideration by the House. The first proposition agreed to by the committee relates to the employment of contract surgeons, and provides that such persons shall only be employed when all the Army surgeons are serving with troops, and only upon the recommendation of department commanders after approval of the General of the Army. The other amendment is identical in terms with the rider put on the Army bill at the extra session. It is as follows: "No money appropriated by this act is appropriated or shall be paid for the subsistence, equipment, transportation, or compensation of any portion of the Army of the United States to be used as a police force to keep the peace at any election held within any State." It may be remembered that this provision was adopted as a compromise, and was advocated by Gen. Garfield and a number of other leading Republicans. It encountered decided opposition, however, from some of the Republican Senators. The proposed amendment will encounter decided opposition from many Republicans in the House, and will probably lead to a protracted debate. It is understood that Gen. Garfield will favor the amendment if it is offered. The Committee on Military Affairs also considered a bill to reduce the number of Paymasters from 50 to 25. On the adoption of the bill there was a tie vote, but it was agreed, as several members of the committee were absent, to postpone further consideration of the bill until the next meeting. If this bill is adopted by the committee, it also will be offered as an amendment to the Army bill.

A DEPARTMENT RUN BY CLERKS.

THE POSTAL SERVICE VIRTUALLY MANAGED BY TWO INCOMPETENT CLERKS—JUDGE KEY IN A RIDICULOUS ATTITUDE.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—The recent decision of the United States Circuit Court, at Louisville, to the effect that the action of the Postmaster there, in seizing and detaining letters addressed to lottery-dealers was illegal, and that the Postmaster is liable in damages, has created quite a sensation at the Post Office Department. The detention of the letters was, of course, in accordance with the orders of the Postmaster-General, who has issued similar orders to many of the Postmasters at the larger cities. Gen. Key is understood to have acted in the matter by the advice of the law officer of the department—or rather by that of a clerk in the office of the Assistant Attorney-General for the Post Office Department—Mr. A. H. Bissell, who, it is alleged, has been permitted to manage not only this but various other matters in the department, to the great prejudice of its interests and reputation. He was detailed by the Postmaster-General, in connection with Mr. Kirby, Gen. Key's private secretary, to prepare the volume of regulations under the recently-enacted Postal laws; and as both of these gentlemen were entirely without practical experience in postal affairs, the result of their labors is not such as to reflect credit on the department or to justify the wisdom of their selection for the task. The regulations framed by them on the subject of rates of postage on mail matter containing writing (other than letters and postal cards) is said by competent authority to be in direct violation of law, and to have entailed a loss to the postal revenues which foots up among the millions. Since the appearance of the book, the Department has been overwhelmed with inquiries from numerous Postmasters as to its novel, and often contradictory and impracticable provisions, a large number of which it has been found necessary to modify or rescind—while the "rulings" issued from time to time (ostensibly by the First Assistant Postmaster-General, whose official duty it is to construe the postal laws and regulations, but really by Mr. Bissell) have been of the most extraordinary and confusing description, so that Postmasters in every part of the country are in a state of hopeless perplexity as to their duties under the law.

The arbitrary detention of letters addressed to lottery-dealers on the assumption that they "relate to lottery business" is said to have been ordered on Mr. Bissell's suggestion, and to him also is credited the singular recommendation made by the Postmaster-General in his annual report, that the word "illegal" should be stricken from the statute prohibiting the mailing of circulars, &c., pertaining to "illegal lotteries," which recommendation placed Gen. Key in the strange attitude of requesting Congress to modify the law so as to make conformity to action he had already taken, instead of conforming his action to the provisions of existing statutes, until Congress should see fit to amend or repeal them. One result of this indiscretion, to use a mild phrase, has been the commencement of several suits against Postmasters who have been acting under Clerk Bissell's order; and as a United States court has now decided their action to be illegal, it is not improbable that Congress will be flooded with bills for their "relief," to enable them to pay the damages which will be recovered by those whose correspondence has been interfered with without other warrant than Mr. Bissell's dictum, based apparently on the idea that it is the main function of the Post Office to prevent the participation by the public in games of chance rather than to provide for the safe and expeditious transportation and delivery of mail matter.

It is well known here to all those familiar with the subject that Messrs. Bissell and Kirby's assumption of the prerogative of Congress in changing the rate of postage on third and fourth class mail matter has resulted in a serious falling off in the revenues of the Post Office—this regulation framed by those gentlemen virtually admitting the bulk of mercantile, banking, and insurance correspondence to the mails at the rate of 1 cent for each two ounces, instead of 3 cents for each half ounce, as provided by law.

The older and more experienced employes at the department have been greatly surprised at the manner in which Mr. Bissell and his coadjutors have been permitted to manipulate and derange the machinery of the postal service at their own sweet will, and predict still more serious results if the control of this important branch of the Federal Government is to continue to be left to their practice hands.

MINOR CONGRESSIONAL WORK.

THE ABSURD ALASKA BILL ABANDONED—MR. COCKRELL'S PET SUBSIDY SCHEME.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—The House Committee on Territories have been much stirred up by the advocates of that ridiculous Alaska Territorial bill, which has been referred to in THE TIMES dispatches. So much annoyed have they been that a meeting of the committee was called and the matter settled, to the great comfort of the members. The full-fledged Territorial bill for Alaska was unceremoniously rejected, and a substitute for the bill, which the Secretary of the Treasury submitted last January, was adopted. This bill provides for the establishment of three Judicial Courts in Alaska, one at Sitka, one at Wrangel, and one to be held on the deck of the revenue steamer as the occasion to the far distant settlements, nearly 2,000 miles to the westward of Sitka, every Summer. The laws of the United States in the Territories are extended over all Alaska, which points to crimes and their punishment; also, the law and the practice governing all matters of probate and testamentary proceedings. These courts are provided with a seal, and are also made courts of record. The fact that there are less than 250 white men, women, and children in all this vast extent of 577,000 square miles of Alaska has justly made the idea of supplying them with a retinue of high salaried officers at the public cost out of ridicule with the committee. As affairs now stand in Alaska the revenue marine cutter with her armament is ample to hold all the Indians in perfect subjection, and the statutes of 1868 give to the President and the Secretary of the Treasury all power and authority to regulate trade and intercourse with the natives. The United States laws relating to Customs and revenue are extended by the same statute over Alaska, and have been in force there ever since.

Senator Cockrell made another attempt to-day to get his Swamp Lands subsidy into the hands of the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads. This bill, which provides for the annual payment of $135,000 to a steam-ship line for carrying the mails and express packages to the West Indies and Rio Janeiro, has been sent to the Committee on Commerce, where it remains, notwithstanding an attempt to get it out, already described in THE TIMES. Mr. Cockrell introduced the same bill again to-day after having crossed out the words in it which fixed the date beyond which it is to be referred to the Post Office and Post Roads Committee. This motion was opposed by Messrs. Conkling, Morrill, Davis of West Virginia, and Hereford. Mr. Conkling said that its passage would set two committees at work on the same bill, and characterized Mr. Cockrell's action as an attempt to circumvent the Senate by verbal finesse and ingenuity. Mr. Cockrell made a lame defense of his position, and was feebly supported by Mr. Maxey. Chairman of the Committee on Post Offices, but Mr. Conkling remarked that the two bills were identical in purpose, in order to shut off a debate which threatened to consume considerable time. Mr. Ingalls insisted upon a strict observance of the rule that the first two readings of a bill shall be on separate days. The second reading was, therefore, postponed until another day.

THE HIGH PRICE OF PAPER.

A LETTER FROM THE HON. JOSEPH MEDILL PRESENTING THE CASE OF THE NEWSPAPER PUBLISHERS.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—Mr. Joseph Medill, of the Chicago Tribune, has addressed the following letter to Gen. Garfield in reference to removing the duty on wood pulp:

CHICAGO, March 29, 1880.

Gen. J. A. Garfield:

DEAR SIR: The sudden and abnormal advance in the price of printing paper has naturally filled the minds of publishers with alarm. The paper-makers meet monthly and vote a further increase of prices, and pour in memorials on Congress justifying it, and urging that the newspaper business is so flourishing that it can stand almost any conceivable rise without being raised. They point to the exaggerated reports of the profits of a few of the older and stronger journals in justification of their demoralized raid, but are careful to make no allusion to the condition of the ninety and nine publishers of every hundred who are being driven to the wall by them.

There are some points in this controversy to which I desire to call your attention, which have not been really clearly presented heretofore:

1. This is a case in which two classes of manufacturers insist that Congress should continue to them the power of robbing a third class of manufacturers, the latter from the peculiarity of their business being unable to transfer the burden upon the public or consumers, as merchants and dealers can do, but must suffer the whole loss entailed by the Congressional discrimination against them. If publishers increase their subscription prices to correspond with the great and sudden rise in the cost of paper, they lose their subscribers, as recent experiments fully demonstrate; if they materially reduce the size of their sheets, they cripple their ability to accommodate their advertising patrons, or they must suppress so much of their news space as to furnish the reading public with an unsatisfactory sheet. They are thus placed between the upper and nether millstone. They are caught on the horns of a dilemma literally.

2. The protective policy is not intended to enable one class of manufacturers to favor another. Publishers are manufacturers, and were so classified and taxed during and after the war. They give employment to 10 times as many operatives as pulp and paper makers do, and whatever paper-tax policy strikes them injuriously, injures 10 times as many employers and employes as it helps. An artificial rise in paper, promoted and protected by Congressional interference in behalf of pulp and paper mills and pulp mills, must necessarily result in a reduction of the wages of compositors, pressmen, clerks, carriers, reporters, editors, correspondents, and other newspaper employes, and in loss also to the proprietors. The damage done by these Congressional favoritisms reacts back on the entire publishing business by a law of political economy with which you, of course, are familiar.

3. Newspaper publishers have no protection from the tariff such as other manufacturers enjoy, and all the "protection" they are asking to be relieved from an unnecessary, revenue-raised burdensome, and demoralizing tax imposed for the enrichment of paper-makers at their expense. The pulp and paper tax is not protective in operation, and therefore violates protective principles. It does not even possess the excuse of being levied for revenue purposes, as it produces no revenue for the Government, and never has yet an amount worth mentioning. This tax, as I have said, is anti-protective, as it seriously damages the manufacturing business of publishers, which is enormously greater than that of pulp-paper making and wood-pulp grinding, and at the same time is unprotected by the latter against foreign competition.

4. There is no country in the world in which paper can be manufactured as cheaply as in the United States, and the reasons are, that the raw materials called "waste—weed and straw—are found in greater abundance at the lowest cost; that rags, old rope, refuse gunny-bagging, cotton-waste, and the like are duty free, cheap and plentiful; that the motive power for driving the machinery is water, costing little or nothing; that the labor employed is mainly boys and girls and women, and but few men, and the wages paid therefor are small, and the business is nearly or entirely free from labor strikes and trades-union dictation; whereas, the pulp-paper business is conducted by skilled, high-priced experts, working in league or combination for the advance and maintenance of wages scales. Pulp and paper making is now carried on by most ingenious labor-saving machines and processes, by which great products are turned out with few and low-paid employes, and the power, being water, is almost gratuitous. Hence, it may be safely affirmed that of all branches of American manufactures pulp and print-paper making have the least to fear from foreign competition, and stand least in need of what is called "Congressional protection." As an industry it is now a robust "strapping infant" that requires a pap-bottle, but in a stalwart, robust adult, perfectly able to take care of itself without coddling from Congress.

5. Print paper is a commodity that represents large weight and bulk to a given value, consequently the freight and expenses of importation are heavy, and domestic paper mills have a large natural and legitimate protection against foreign competitors, and this cost of importation gives an abundant protection so long as paper-makers are content with a fair profit on their products. The existing duty is only used to "protect" pooling combinations, and unhealthy prices, and to place publishers under the shelter of an iniquitous law.

6. The general policy of Congress has heretofore been to permit manufacturers to import their raw materials free of tax, hence the large free lists in the tariff act. This policy is undoubtedly wise, and under it the pulp-maker imports hard and soft wood, free of duty, if he wishes to, and the paper-maker is permitted to import rags, old junk, old rope, various grasses, and a large variety of raw material used in paper manufacture too numerous have to mention. In order that there may be no further pretext for retaining the existing onerous duties on print paper, many hundreds, perhaps thousands, of publishers have petitioned Congress to add wood and other pulps and soda-ash to the free list. On what conceptual or revenue principle wood and other pulps are taxed 90 per cent, surpasses the comprehension of publishers. Is not a patent monopoly sufficient protection on wood-pulp making? If it is the public interest that an article which costs 1 cent a pound to make shall be so protected as to sell at 3½ and 4 cents a pound? Is it the duty of Congress to aid by the law this kind of robbery?

7. The raw material used by publishers consists of unsized print paper. Why should not this raw material of publishers be placed on the free list, as well as the raw material of the manufacturers? Why does Congress discriminate against publishing manufacturers, denying them free raw material, while it gives free raw material to pulp and paper makers? Congress acts as if it had an enmity toward the newspaper business and maliciously desired to cripple and injure it. The retention of the onerous and wholly unnecessary paper duty furnishes grounds for a presumption of that kind which the promulgation of new paper-postage not is not calculated to remove.

I have thus placed before you some aspects of the case as they appear from the stand-point of the publishers of the West.

It is said that now an apprehension prevails in the minds of some of the members of the Ways and Means Committee that if a bill be presented to the House removing the tax on pulp, soda-ash, and unsized printing paper, other interests may obtrude themselves and load it down with amendments of a character that will sink the bill. But this fear will not be realized unless a majority of the House are hostile to the bill and resort to this method of killing it. But they cannot do it without manifesting and discovering their cloven foot, and if there be a majority of the House intent on retaining the present tax on paper, let it be so recorded. The bill will be passed without amendment if the House desires to remove the tax. I need not argue this point further. But entreaties myself, very respectfully, yours, MEDILL.

P. S.—I observe that a committee of New-York publishers recently appeared before the Ways and Means Committee, only asking for a removal of the duty on wood-pulp, and I notice from the report that they were pretty well browbeated and bulldozed by the honorable members of Congress for their temerity. They would have asked for the removal of the duty on paper also, but were impressed with the belief that it would be useless, and hence they restricted their petition to very humble dimensions, but probably with the effect of being treated with contempt. M.

The memorandum prepared for the press by the Clerk of the Committee on Ways and Means in explanation of the reasons certain of the tariff amendments recently attributed Mr. Felton's amendment to Mr. Conger, which explains the discrepancy in the press reports. The facts in the case are that Mr. Felton moved to amend by adding printing paper and wood pulp to the free list. Mr. Kelley moved to amend Mr. Felton's amendment so that it would read "that all printing paper, wood pulp, jute butts, unmanufactured flax, straw, and all other fibrous plants, fit for use in the manufacture of paper, be placed on the free list." Mr. Tucker's amendment, as adopted, reads as follows: "Flannels, blankets, hand of wool, knit goods, balmorals, worsteds, and worsted yarns, and all manufactures of every description composed wholly or in part of worsted, the hair of the Alpaca goat, or other like animals, except such as are composed in part of wool, not otherwise provided for, 40 per cent ad valorem."

THE EXODUS FROM THE SOUTH.

A COLORED MAN EXPLAINS THE OPPRESSIVE LAWS OF ALABAMA.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—The Senate Exodus Committee to-day examined James T. Rapier, colored, of Calhoun, Ala. He said there were several reasons for the exodus. Among others, he mentioned the poverty of the soil, want of school facilities, and local laws prejudicial to black children. In regard to school facilities, he said: "We only have schools three months in the year, and I need not say any more on that head." He said the average yield of cotton in Alabama was one bale to three acres, and that an average production for one hand was four bales a year, of which the land-owner usually gets one-half, leaving two bales, worth $90, as the net yearly earnings of one man. He produced and read a table of prices charged by merchants for necessaries of life, and claimed that merchants make a profit of 100 per cent in their dealings with the negroes. He also read extracts from Alabama statutes prohibiting any person from carrying or selling any farm produce after sunset or before sunrise, and also prohibiting the selling of seed cotton, either day or night, in certain sections of the State, claiming that, while the purpose of these laws was to prevent stealing, the effect was to place the crop entirely in the hands of the land-owners. The grievance he complained of resulting from the sundown-sunrise laws was, that in many instances they prevented the negro from enjoying the fruits of his labor. It was on the court records of his State, he said, that a negro had been convicted of grand larceny for taking less than a peck of corn from a field which he was cultivating on shares. Referring to the Alabama juror laws, he said they ought to be called laws "to keep the negro off the jury." He mentioned several suits between white men and negroes before white juries, in which, he claimed, unjust verdicts had been rendered against the negro, and maintained that it was almost impossible for a negro to get justice in these jury trials. As an illustration and in support of this assertion, he mentioned a suit which occurred at Talladega, Ala. A negro had been arrested for stealing a hog. The jury, the witness said, brought in a verdict of guilty. In the course of the trial the negro's counsel, Mr. McAffee, ex-United States District Attorney, proved conclusively by the testimony of the owner of the hog, that the defendant was attending a meeting, eight miles distant, at the time the larceny was committed. Mr. McAffee, in summing up, began by stating that he had no hopes of winning the case. He told the Judge that he dared not charge the jury properly, and said to the white jurymen: "You are afraid to bring in a verdict of innocent," and further remarked that he had observed all that was necessary to procure a verdict against a negro accused of hog-stealing was, first, to prove that a hog had been stolen, and, next, that a negro was somewhere in the neighborhood.

Senator Vance asked if it was not a fact that pilfering by the slacks had been carried on to such an extent throughout Alabama that the raising of hogs and poultry had been abandoned, and whether this was not the cause of the enactment of such stringent laws against petit larceny. The witness admitted that there was a great deal of pilfering, but thought it was not carried to the blacks. Pilfering he said, was alleged as the reason for passing these laws, but he thought the real reason was to be found in a desire on the part of the whites to oppress the laborer. The witness related his experiences with the Kuklux in Northern Alabama in 1868. Armed men came after him several times, and his life was in danger. He accounted for his ultimate escape by stating that he had "fought some and run a good deal." The reason the negroes act in so cowardly a manner, he said, is because they fear the whole moral force of the country. If they were to band together to assert their rights, and fight to preserve them, more men from the North, both Democrats and Republicans, would go South to suppress them than went to the first Bull Run battle.

Senator Vance intimated that if the witness thought white Republicans would go South to suppress the efforts of the negro to preserve his rights, he ought to quit voting with Republicans South, to which Rapier replied, "Oh, no; they are the best of a bad lot."

THE NEGRO VOTE OF MISSOURI.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—A delegation of colored men from St. Louis, consisting of J. Milton Turner, ex-United States Minister to Liberia; J. T. Smith, Charlton H. Tanney, J. W. Wilson, and Alfred Carter, called upon the President to-day, and represented to him that the negro vote of the State of Missouri is entirely unrepresented in official positions in that State; that the Irish and German vote together comprise the bulk of the Republican vote of the State; that the negro vote amounted to 40,000, and controls two, if not three, Congressional districts of St. Louis; that if the President would elevate a colored man to a responsible official position in Missouri it would reunite the colored people, who are now disaffected on account of having to carry the burdens of the party without charge or emoluments. The President said that he was in favor of doing all that he could for the colored people, and gave Mr. Wilson a copy of the following letter to Government officers, written by himself on May 7, 1877:

DEAR SIR: The appointment of colored men to positions under you for which they are qualified will meet my hearty approval of their race consideration, and will diminish race prejudice. Other elements of your population are, of course, not to be overlooked. Subordinate appointments should be arranged so as to harmonize and meet the wishes and approval of all classes of good citizens, and at the same time promote the efficiency of the service. Very truly yours,

R. B. HAYES.

GRANT AT THE CARNIVAL COURT.

NEW-ORLEANS, April 1.—Gen. Grant had a reception at the St. Charles Hotel from 1 to 3 o'clock this afternoon, and afterward took a drive through the city. Last night the Carnival Court, having serenaded the Queen and other distinguished members of the Court, in accordance with the annual custom, repaired, finally, to the mansion of Albert Baldwin, President of the Royal Host, where a large company, including Gen. Grant, who had been specially invited by the host, was in attendance. After an introduction to the ex-President, the entire company participated in a banquet. During its progress Mr. Baldwin announced that Gen. Grant had been elected a member of the Royal Host and the title of Duke of America conferred upon him. The General was immediately decorated with the order of St. Her by Judge George H. Brengan, Lord High Chamberlain, and the General acknowledged the compliment in substance as follows: "Ladies and gentlemen, I thank you very much for this kind reception and for the compliment which the Rex Association has just paid me; for, pronounced republican as I am, it would, under ordinary circumstances, hardly be proper for me to accept the distinction which you have just conferred upon me, especially as I have been frequently charged with an attempt to seize upon a higher title; but, as I said before, under such circumstances, and appreciating the objects of your worthy organization, I accept the title of Duke, and thank you again for the compliment paid and the kind reception extended me."

KEARNEY'S PARTY BEATEN.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 31.—Owing to mismanagement on the part of some of the election officers the count is incomplete, but the majority of the Citizens' ticket will not vary much from 6,900. It is undecided whether the Working Men will contest the election on the ground of the difference in the ballot-paper, though it is reported that they will. The facts regarding the paper are ascertained to be that the Working Men procured it from the Secretary of State, while the Citizens' Union obtained theirs from a city dealer. There is no evidence that the variation in color was intentional. As to the charge of the surveillance of voters, rendered possible by the difference in the color of the ballots, the most charitable hypothesis is that it was done simply to keep the run of the voting, with a view of anticipating the result in a general way. Whether or not any contest is made, the general impression seems to be that nothing will come of it, as a mere formality will not be allowed to reverse the clearly manifested will of the people.

COURTESY AGAIN OBTRUDATE.

MOUNTAINSIDE, N. Y., April 1.—It was proposed to have a conference of Hanlon, Courtney, Riley, and Blakiie here to-morrow to make final arrangements for the race. The rowing has been declared off, Courtney refusing to row, Blakiie telegraphs that he will arrange matters by mail.

GENERAL FOREIGN NEWS

RUSSIA'S COMPLICATIONS.

THE RELATIONS WITH FRANCE—THE UNPUNISHED ASSASSIN OF A RUSSIAN OFFICER.

LONDON, April 1.—A Paris correspondent, writing to St. Petersburg, says he has had an interview with Premier de Freycinet, who declared that Gen. Chanzy, French Ambassador to Russia, intended to return to France to preside at the sittings of the Council of Ardennes, and would probably return to St. Petersburg afterward, it being anticipated that by that time a new Russian Ambassador would have arrived in Paris.

A Constantinople correspondent says: "The delay in regard to the sentence of the assassin of the Russian Col. Commeroff causes indignation. The Russian representative threatens to quit Constantinople if justice is not speedily done."

A Berlin dispatch says Russia has issued a circular to the powers proposing an agreement limiting the right of asylum. Germany has answered favorably.

LONDON, April 2.—A St. Petersburg dispatch says it is rumored that 1,500 Chinese troops have crossed the eastern Russian frontier at Usuri, south of the Amoor, and that 50,000 are concentrated on the western frontier.

A Paris dispatch says that Prince Orloff, immediately on reaching St. Petersburg, visited Gen. Chanzy, the French Ambassador. By allowing Gen. Chanzy to remain at St. Petersburg—thus giving Prince Orloff an opportunity of showing him this courtesy—the French Government has evidently smoothed down the difficulty, and it may now be hoped that Russia will resume satisfactory relations with France.

SPAIN AND CUBA.

THE NEW AMERICAN MINISTER—PROMPT MEASURES EXPECTED RELATING TO CUBA.

MADRID, April 1.—Gen. Lucius Fairchild, the newly-appointed United States Minister to this Court, presented his credentials to King Alfonso yesterday. Gen. Fairchild expressed the friendly feelings of America toward Spain, and the King replied in a similar spirit.

LONDON, April 1.—A Madrid correspondent says: "The Cortes met on Wednesday, after the Easter holidays recess. The Government has signified their intention to discuss the Cuban estimates before taking up the imperial budget, as the situation of the Treasury of that colony requires prompt measures. The Government have, during the month of March, provided the Captain-General of Cuba with $2,000,000 for suppressing insurrection. Every shade of the opposition in the Cortes is anxiously watching Cuban affairs, hoping—the correspondent believes prematurely—to find an opportunity to defeat the Cabinet and bring in the Dynastic Liberals by an alliance with Gen. Martinez-Campos and the dissatisfied Generals who have been excluded from political influence by the policy of Premier Canovas del Castillo. In diplomatic and political circles the probabilities of a change in the Government this Summer are freely discussed."

TOPICS OF INTEREST ABROAD.

MONS, Belgium, April 1.—An explosion of fire-damp occurred yesterday in a colliery at Anderlues. The number of lives lost is unknown, but 20 bodies have already been recovered. There were 150 persons in the pit at the time of the disaster.

PARIS, April 1.—A circular signed by M. Duclerc, Vice-President of the Senate, has been sent to all the members of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies, setting forth a project for the construction of a maritime canal between Bordeaux and Narbonne, thus connecting the Atlantic with the Mediterranean. M. Duclerc urges the military, economical, and commercial advantages of such a canal, and concludes by an appeal to the Government to undertake the work, or at least aid in its execution. The scheme has already been examined by a private company.

LONDON, April 1.—The Envoy of the King of Siam is expected on his second visit to England in the middle of May. It had been arranged that the King himself would come and invest Queen Victoria with the Order of the White Elephant, but his visit is postponed for the present in consequence of the indisposition of the ex-Regent, who would, in the King's absence, have had the reins of government.

It is expected that Admiral Pothuan, French Ambassador to England, will soon resign that post.

ATHENS, April 1.—King George has warmly thanked the Hon. Charles Tuckerman, formerly United States Minister here, for a paper on the Greek frontier question which he urgently some time ago for the consideration of the Mixed Commission.

BUENOS AYRES, March 8.—The Chilian ironclad Huascar is bombarding Arica three hours daily. A part of the town is burning. It is defended by 12,000 Peruvians, who have inflicted much injury upon the Huascar.

THE VERMONT DEMOCRATS.

WATERBURY, Vt., April 1.—The Democratic State Committee met to-night to fix a time and place for holding a State Convention for the selection of delegates to the National Convention. Gen. "Baldy" Smith was present among the guests and addressed the meeting. A strong Hancock sentiment prevailed. It was decided to hold the convention at Montpelier on April 22. After the National Convention adjourns a ratification meeting will be held, and a State ticket nominated.

FALL FROM A RAILROAD BRIDGE.

TROY, N. Y., April 1.—While 15 men were employed to-day in placing in position a portion of the last span of the new bridge over the Hudson, from Cohoes to Lansingburg, the scaffolding upon which they were standing, and which was supported by two iron lateral braces of the structure, gave way and precipitated 10 of the men into the river. Five of the employes, by jumping, succeeded in obtaining a foothold on the bridge, and did not fall with their companions into the water. The 10 workmen who were carried with the scaffolding into the river fall a distance of 47 feet, and it was feared by the spectators that a great loss of life must follow. The alarm was immediately given to the shore, and in less than two minutes several row-boats were upon the scene, and the men, swimming and struggling in the icy water, were speedily rescued. It is a remarkable fact that there was not a single life lost. Mr. Hilt, one of the contractors, was badly injured about the ankles, and received several cuts and bruises. Thomas Sullivan received painful injuries to the back, the fall extent of which have not yet been ascertained. Charles Blair sustained a dislocated ankle. The wounded men were carried to their homes and medical assistance was promptly summoned. The accident was caused by the breaking of the iron lateral. In falling the men named were injured by the planks of the scaffolding, which struck them. Work on the bridge will not be suspended in consequence of the accident.

NAVAL INTELLIGENCE.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—The United States steamer Nipsic sailed from Portsmouth, Va., last night for Ville-Franche, France, the head-quarters of the European station.

Order Midshipmen Harry P. Huse and W. L. Rodgers have reported their return home, having been detached from the Pensacola, and have been placed on waiting orders.

Hereafter, by order of the Secretary, in order to facilitate the execution of orders given by the Navy Department or any of its bureaus, to the commandants of the Navy-Yard at Norfolk, Va., to furnish vessels arriving in Hampton Roads with articles to be supplied from that yard, commanding officers of vessels who are junior to the commandant will report to him their arrival in the Roads.

The following circular has been issued by Secretary Thompson: "When officers of the Navy are required to make oath in answering interrogatories sent them by the Examining Board in Washington, the surgeon attending the examining board will be paid from the contingent of the Navy on presentation of vouchers in any one of the Purchasing Paymasters of the Navy."

MURCADIN WINS SECOND PLACE.

LONDON, April 1.—The race for the Surrey Open Steeple-chase (handicap) was run to-day at the Croydon April meeting, and was won by Mr. D. Dunlop's 6-year-old ch. h. Beaubas. The second place was secured by Mr. James Gordon Bennett's 5-year-old b. h. Muscadin, and the third place by Capt. Machell's b. h. Hobbiomel, aged. Five horses ran. Beaubas won by 10 lengths.

SEEKING RELIEF IN SUICIDE.

BORDENTOWN, N. J., April 1.—George Warner Engles, the Treasurer of this city, while laboring under a temporary aberration of mind, committed suicide this morning by hanging. The deed was done in a barn near his residence. Mr. English was a popular officer, and is supposed to have been well off.

SOUTH NORWALK, Conn., April 1.—John H. Gregory, a Sheriff's officer, residing in Mottmar Hill, Hoyt's neck, was found dead in his bed in his Dry-Goods Store this morning about 11 o'clock. He had been out of employment since Tuesday, and being without money or friends, it is supposed he committed suicide to end his troubles. Drs. Nolan and Parkes, on examining the body, gave it as their opinion that Graham came to his death from an overdose of morphine.

AMUSEMENTS.

MADISON-SQUARE THEATRE CONCERT.

The first of the matinée concerts at the Madison-Square Theatre yesterday afternoon was a charming entertainment, which was much enjoyed by a brilliant and numerous audience. This easy and beautiful house is well adapted for just such a concert as was given by a number of Mr. Mapleson's most distinguished artists, and the management are to be congratulated in adding to the attractions of their theatre an afternoon concert of such perfect character. It was more like a musical party than a concert, with the important exceptions, however, that at musical parties one cannot hear in comfort anything that may be worth listening to, and that there is seldom anything of merit which compensates for the trouble of attending. An atmosphere of thorough enjoyment pervaded the house yesterday, and as the concert progressed the audience naturally became more pleased as being present and more enthusiastic in applauding the singers. The artists who took part were Mlle. Marimon, Mme. Ambre, Mlle. Belocca, Signor Campanini, Signor Galassi, and Mr. Alfred E. Pease. The programme was well arranged, and was not so long as to make the constant encores which were demanded wearisome. The ladies were beautifully dressed, and appeared to great advantage, the stage was artistically arranged with handsome furniture, ornaments, and articles of vertu, and, in a word, there was every condition for the unequivocal success of the entertainment. Mlle. Marimon sang twice, and was, of course, recalled both times. Her selections were a valse by Matini, and an aria, "L'abeille," by Masset. After the latter she sang the "Lass Rose of Summer," with the same simplicity and elegance that distinguished its performance in the representation of "Marta" the evening before. Mme. Ambre gave an aria from Gounod's "Romeo et Juliette," and followed it with a selection from "Mignon," in both of which she was excellent. Mlle. Belocca appeared three times on the programme, in an aria from "Semiramide," "La ci darem," with Signor Galassi, and in the famous "Rigoletto" quartet, with Mme. Ambre, Signor Campanini, and Signor Galassi. Though these ladies were all in the best voice and sang with perfect taste and skill, the honors of the occasion were undoubtedly won by the great tenor and the baritone of Mr. Mapleson's company. Signor Galassi sang the aria, "Son Pereda," from "La Forza del Destino," magnificently, his grand voice ringing out in the little theatre with the greatest effect. Signor Campanini was in good spirits and excellent voice, and exerted himself to please the audience. His genial manner, and the pleasure he evidently took in singing his best were appreciated from the moment he appeared. He gave a cheerful spirit to the concert with his magnetic influence over his fellow-artists as well as over his hearers. His first selection was the romanza "Oh, ta che in Seno," from "La Forza del Destino," which was exquisitely rendered. For an encore he sang "Donna e mobile," from "Rigoletto," in the spirited manner for which he is famous, and he was recalled several times. The pitiless resistance of the concert was the "Rigoletto" quartet, which was sung three times, owing to Signor Campanini's persuasion of the other artists. Though the curtain had been dropped and Signor Campanini out of sight, had repeated the "Donna e mobile," he brought forward the other three singers, and at the close of the quartet for the third time, when artists and audience were in the best humor, the stage was lowered and the artists gradually disappeared from sight. Mr. Pease was received with favor, and was encored in his brilliant piano solos. A number of eminent artists are engaged for the second concert on Thursday afternoon next.

ITALO CAMPANINI DECORATED.

Italo Campanini, the great tenor, is in receipt of a communication from the Italian Minister to Washington, conveying the information that the King of Italy has conferred upon him the order of the Crown of Italy, and that the insignia of the royal order mounted in gold and jewels is on its way to America. The decoration is regarded as the highest distinction which can be conferred upon an Italian in civil life. King Humbert does himself honor by thus favoring the greatest lyric artist and actor of his time.

MUSICAL NOTES.

Mr. Sealfield announces his fourth concert, at Steinway Hall, for Saturday evening. Miss Emma U. Thursby, Signor Brignoli, and a number of performers will be heard in a long programme of vocal and instrumental music.

The public rehearsal of Berlioz's "La Damnation de Faust," at Steinway Hall yesterday afternoon was attended by an immense audience, which completely filled both the large and small halls. Mr. Schst will take the bass solo part in place of Mr. Remmertz.

Herr Joseffy's "Liszt" programme will be given to-night at Chickering Hall with the assistance of an orchestra under Mr. Carlberg. The four numbers of the concert will be the Concerto in E flat, Hungarian Fantasia, five piano solos, and for the first time, the Fantasia on the "Ruins of Athens" by Beethoven.

The Staten Island Philharmonic Society will have their fourth and last concert at West New Brighton to-night. This enterprising organization have gone much for good music, and have invariably given concerts of a high class. The same series, led by Mr. Richard Arnold, will take part as before, and several other artists have been engaged to sing and play on this occasion.

A Boston paper has lately repeated the statement that one of the judges in the matter of the prize of the Cincinnati Musical College changed his vote after Mr. Dudley Buck had made some alterations in his work at the suggestion of the judge. Mr. Buck has authorized the unqualified denial of this story. Since last he has composition in Cincinnati last September, he has never seen it, has made no change in it, and has never been asked to do so by any person. Now that Mr. Buck and Mr. Theodore Thomas have both denied this story, which was absurd on the face of it, the Boston paper in question should dismiss the matter as unworthy of further serious consideration.

The opera to-night will be "Les Huguenots," which Mr. Mapleson will produce for the first time here. The cast is one which could not be surpassed at any opera-house in the world, and in fact it is doubtful if any other manager could give it with anything like such completeness in every part. In the distribution of the principal characters will show. The list is Valentina, Mme. Ambre; Margherita, Mlle. Marimon; Urbano, Mlle. Belocca; Raoul, Signor Campanini; Conte de Nevers, Signor del Puente; Conte San Bris, Signor Galassi, and Marcel, Herr Behrens. With this cast the public may certainly expect to hear a thoroughly competent rendering of this grand work, and in some respects it promises to be the principal event of Mr. Mapleson's management in this country. The success which has attended the Spring season has inspired alike the impresario, the artists, and public, and, unless all signs fail, a memorable performance may be expected. Signor Arditi's thoroughness and carefulness in matters of detail may be relied upon to have the orchestra and chorus perfectly drilled.

NOMINATIONS AND CONFIRMATIONS.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—The President sent the following nominations to the Senate to-day:

Postmasters.—Francis F. Vincent, Cottage City, Mass.; George Burgess, New-Brighton, N. Y.; John W. Mattern, Phillipsburg, Penn.; Lewis Lamberight, Middletown, Ohio; Thomas W. Scott, Fairfield, Ill.; Henry C. Doty, Reading, Mich.; George H. Tracy, Baker City, Oregon.

The Senate, in executive session, to-day confirmed the following nominations: Victor Tampson, of Mississippi, to be Consul at St. Thomas; William F. Hubbard, Supervisor of Census for the Second District of Maine; John W. Mattern, Postmaster at Phillipsburg, Penn.; Arthur Edwards, of Michigan, Agent for Indians of the Omaha and Winnebago Agency in Nebraska.

The Senate rejected the nomination of Alexander C. Wells to be Surveyor of Customs in the District of New-Orleans.

PROGRESS OF THE STRIKES.

TROY, N. Y., April 1.—The strike at Cohoes shows little change. Yesterday afternoon some excitement was caused among the dissatisfied working men by the arrival of several families from Canada. As the new comers passed through the streets to the homes of friends a crowd of fully 500 strikers followed them. Several spinners, comprehending the situation, quickly formed a protective guard, and accompanied the Canadians to their destinations. A rumor is afoot to the effect that General Manager Robert Johnston has gone East to make purchases of Alling. There is no truth in the story. Mr. Johnston has gone in an entirely different direction on another mission. Pay-day is No. 2 Mill comes on Saturday. The amount of money to be distributed will be less than $10,000, which is about half the amount paid every two weeks. The Harmony Mills, at Lewiston, Me., started in No. 1 Mill weave-room. Here the last strike was begun, and the weavers of that department assumed the initiatory in support of the spinners' demand. The proposed compromise, which the committees of the strikers and the officers of Harmony Mills have been without result. The difference between the striking section hands in the Harmony Mills and the company has been settled. The section hands resumed work at noon to-day. The spinners and weavers are still idle.

The molders employed in the Wood Mowing and Reaping Machine Works, at Hoosick Falls, struck yesterday for an advance in wages. They asked for an increase of 20 per cent. The company agreed to an increase of 15 per cent, and the men resumed work this morning.

STEAM ON THE ERIE CANAL.

THE NEW-YORK STEAM CABLE TOWING COMPANY,

Having purchased all the property of the Fulton Towing Company—the only company supplying boatmen with animal power on the Erie Canal—will be ready, on the opening of navigation this Spring, to tow canal-boats to and from Buffalo, Oswego, and Troy.

Animal power will be used on the canal between Rochester and Troy until equipped with the cable system. It is expected that by July 1 next the cable system will be in operation on the whole line of the canal, using animal power on the shortest levels and at the locks. Wire rope now made, will be laid in the canal when open for navigation, connecting the cable from Rochester to Syracuse.

The charge for towing will be twenty cents per mile, the same as for animal power, at which point equal economy will be realized for the whole distance of navigation, thus insuring boatmen a uniform cost of towage.

The speed will be about three miles per hour, until boatmen become accustomed to handling boats at this speed increase over the speed by animal power.

To facilitate the assembling of canal-boats towed together or in long trains, by the cable system, boat-owners should substitute a winch for the tiller, at an expense of $15, and supply a hawser of twenty fathoms in length, with a small boat, an iron shackling-bar according to the form this company adopts as the best, simplest, and cheapest, the General Superintendent of this company will supply information relative to these appliances.

The company solicits the patronage of all whose business interests are connected with or pertain to the Erie Canal. Boatmen will receive the additional profits of increased speed at same cost as animal power, and without additional cost utilize the long term of steam power for moving canal-boats on the Erie Canal, without changing their present connection and by paying the tow-line to a cable tow-boat as new to the animal on the new cable.

Any persons who shall injure or disturb the wire cable which this company lays in the canal, or detain or separate the boats using the cable or tower thereby, will incur the penalty of the law and be liable to the fine and imprisonment as provided in section 1 of Chapter 279 of the Laws of 1879.

EMERSON FOOTE,
President.

MADISON M. CALEF, Gen'l Sup't.
NEW-YORK, 26th March, 1880.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:

The Manhattan Savings Institution of the City of New-York hereby gives notice, pursuant to the provisions of chapter 39 of the laws of 1880, requiring all persons in possession of any of the one hundred and eighteen bonds for one thousand dollars each, issued by the City of Yonkers, and numbered one hundred and twenty-one to two hundred and forty-two, two hundred and fifty-one to two hundred and seventy-six, two hundred and eighty-one to three hundred and forty, three hundred and thirty-one to three hundred and fifty, all inclusive, each bearing date the first day of May, in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five, and payable to bearer, one of said bonds numbered from three hundred and fifty-one to three hundred and forty-two, both inclusive, payable on the first day of April, one thousand eight hundred and eighty; twenty-eight of said bonds numbered from two hundred and forty-three, both inclusive, payable on the first day of April, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one; thirty of said bonds numbered from three hundred and forty-three, both inclusive, payable on the first day of April, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-two; twenty of said bonds numbered from five hundred and twenty-one to five hundred and forty, both inclusive, payable on the first day of April, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three; twenty of said bonds numbered from five hundred and forty-one to five hundred and sixty, both inclusive, payable on the first day of April, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-four; twenty of said bonds numbered from five hundred and sixty-one to five hundred and eighty, both inclusive, payable on the first day of April, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-five; and twenty of said bonds numbered from five hundred and eighty-one to six hundred, both inclusive, payable on the first day of April, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six, with interest thereon, in the meantime, semi-annually on the first days of April and October, in each year, at the rate of seven per centum per annum, on the presentation of the interest coupons attached to said bonds, said bonds being known as the "City of Yonkers" bonds, issued by said Manhattan Savings Institution, and were issued pursuant to chapter two hundred and ninety-seven of the Laws of one thousand eight hundred and eighty-one, to the said Manhattan

THE METHODIST MINISTERS

CRITICISMS IN THE NEW-YORK CONFERENCE.

MISMANAGEMENT OF FUNDS HINTED AT—A MASSACHUSETTS MINISTER WANTS TO BE INVESTIGATED—A RETREAT FOR WORN-OUT PREACHERS.

Yesterday's session of the New-York Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church was enlivened by a very animated, and at times rather bitter, debate on the question of the election of Conference Trustees, during which the ministers got themselves so tangled up that half the session was required to set themselves straight again. After the minutes of Wednesday had been adopted, and one or two minor matters disposed of, the five Presiding Elders of the Conference were made as additional Standing Committees on Missions. The examination of the ministers' characters was resumed, Bishop Wiley naming the Pastors in the Poughkeepsie District. Presiding Elder A. K. Sanford reported the churches of the district in a prosperous condition, and as having met with excellent success in their special efforts to pay off their debts. The character of each Pastor was approved until the Rev. W. L. Pattison, of the church at Lenox, Mass., was reached. Presiding Elder Sanford announced that since he had come to the Conference he had received certain papers which tended to reflect somewhat upon Mr. Pattison, and the latter had requested that a committee be appointed to inquire into the matter. The Bishop said he would select the committee later in the day, and then the remaining Pastors of the districts were passed upon favorably.

When this business had been settled the Rev. L. M. Vincent began to read the report of the Trustees of the Conference. Before he had finished he read that there were four vacancies to be filled in the board, and to fill these four persons were nominated by the remaining Trustees. Dr. Vincent stopped at this point and asked the Conference to elect these persons right away. Secretary McLean at once objected in a long speech, which brought out numerous other speeches, and thus began the special feature of the day's session. Mr. McLean spoke strongly against Dr. Vincent's motion, and objected vigorously to "any close corporation business" in the Board of Trustees. Year after year, he said, the Trustees had nominated the members of their own body and asked the Conference to elect them without any question or discussion, until now the members of the Conference could not tell what is done with the very sacred fund in charge of the Trustees. "There is room for a question," he exclaimed, "and room for an examination behind the question of the financial wisdom—I don't mean honesty—of some of the investments made by the Trustees. Yet we have been asked from time immemorial to elect those nominated by the Trustees themselves."

"Mr Brother McLean means any reflection upon us," interrupted the Rev. Dr. M. D'C. Crawford, his face growing very red, "I hope he will give particulars."

"I am not reflecting on the character of any body," replied the Secretary, "but some of us do know and believe there is room for a little just a little, criticism. Those who have contributions to make to our Conference fund would have much more confidence if they knew the Bishop had named a committee to nominate the Trustees of that fund. I move that as a substitute for Brother Vincent's motion."

Dr. Crawford said the same question had been before the Conference before, and the Conference had decided the Trustees should do just as they had done. "When the Conference wants us to do otherwise we shall be ready to do so," he added. "I think Brother McLean has reflected on the Board of Trustees. He has more than intimated that some of our investments are unwise, and—"

"No, I have not!" exclaimed the Secretary. "I utterly disclaim any such thought or intention. But Brother Crawford is now reflecting upon me."

"Yes, I meant to. I wanted to balance the thing," answered Dr. Crawford, and another sharp tilt ensued between the two clergymen. Mr. McLean finally called his opponent to order, and again declared that there was no intention to reflect upon the Trustees. Dr. Crawford insisted that his remarks showed there was such an intention, and then the Secretary made another speech explaining his position.

The Rev. E. Wheatley spoke next, claiming emphatically that there was a question as to the past wisdom of the Trustees, and that there is a question in the minds of many as to the wisdom of the present "close corporation" system. At this point the Rev. Dr. G. D. Foss offered as a substitute for Mr. McLean's substitute a resolution "that the Bishop appoint a committee of three to nominate Trustees and report back to investigate—[cries of "No, no, not investigate. Say examine."] "Well," said the Doctor, "to examine these public charges—" "Stop, stop," cried a dozen voices. "Not charges." There are no charges." Then the resolution was finally changed so that the committee was to "nominate Trustees and report upon the administration of the Board." This resolution provoked plenty of discussion and half a dozen different amendments. The Rev. J. F. Hermance declared he had been a member of the Conference a good many years, and had never heard a fair discussion referred to by Brother Crawford. He was glad, he said, that Brother McLean had the courage to speak out as he had, and while he had nothing to say as to the question of mismanagement of the funds, he was in favor of the Rev. Dr. W. H. H. Morris's substitute. Dr. W. H. Morris favored a division of the responsibility of nominating Trustees, so that both the latter and the Conference should share it. He tried to offer a substitute to this effect, but the Bishop ruled this out of order. The Rev. M. A. Cohen urged a thorough ventilation of the whole matter, declaring that insinuations of unwise investments had been repeatedly heard at the Conference sessions. Dr. G. S. Hare proposed that the committee should nominate after consulting with the Trustees. More talk followed, and Secretary McLean declined to allow his motion to be put. Motions, substitutes, and amendments followed one another in rapid succession until nobody knew just what to talk about. Then Dr. Foss offered to withdraw his motion, and the Bishop decided it was too late to do so. Finally, a vote was taken on the motion and it was carried. It was immediately voted to transpose the two clauses of the motion, and after a few more clearing-up speeches had been made, the report of the Trustees was finished and adopted.

It was announced that the Hon. Thomas H. Suckley had given the Conference a five-thousand-dollar farm of 126 acres at Rhinebeck, N. Y., upon which to build homes for the worn-out preachers of the Conference. To build these houses $1,600 had been subscribed by various laymen, but $1,000 more was needed. Within 15 minutes this sum was raised among the Pastors of the Conference.

By request of Dr. Newman the vote by which an extra session to elect General Conference delegates was ordered for Monday afternoon was reconsidered, and after some discussion the election was fixed for 2:30 o'clock to-morrow afternoon. The Conference will elect the two lay delegates at 11 o'clock to-day. Bishop Wiley introduced the Rev. Dr. C. H. Fowler to the conference, and Dr. Fowler presented the claims of the Christian Advocate for the hearty support of the ministers. The Bishop announced several special committees, among them being one of seven members, under the Chairmanship of the Rev. Dr. J. M. King, to look into the reports concerning Mr. Pattison. The Rev. Dr. J. M. Reid pronounced the benediction and the Conference adjourned until 8:30 o'clock this morning.

The programme for to-day includes the memorial services for deceased ministers at 2 o'clock, the sacrament of the Lord's Supper at 3 o'clock, and the anniversary of the Freedman's Aid Society at 8 o'clock. During the forenoon session the candidates for admission into full connection with the Conference will be admitted, this ceremony having been postponed yesterday for lack of time.

The committee appointed to examine the papers received by Presiding Elder Sanford regarding the Rev. W. L. Pattison, held a second session in the afternoon. Chairman King said afterward to a TIMES reporter that while the committee was not yet ready to make its report, it would without doubt eventually report that it had found nothing worthy of investigation, and that there was no reason why Mr. Pattison's character should not be passed. Dr. King preferred not to say what matters had come before the committee, but it was learned elsewhere that a number of anonymous letters were at the bottom of the affair.

The church was packed in the evening at the anniversary of the Church Extension Society, when addresses were made by the Rev. Drs. William F. Hatfield and G. C. McCabe. The Rev. Dr. M. A. Cohen presided. The Rev. Dr. Hatfield, after speaking in behalf of the Bishops' forms of purpose and work of the society, turned his attention to the South and said he doubted that the chasm between the North and the South had been closed up yet. Parts of the South were not yet reconstructed. Dr. Hatfield quoted Toombs's celebrated telegram regarding Gen. Grant, and said he didn't believe the great question of fraternity between the two sections was to be settled by Bishops meeting and exchanging photographs, nor by conventions at which complimentary resolutions were passed. The only way in which a settlement would be reached was by educating the growing children in the South to love the Union and the Stars and Stripes. "That can only be done," said Dr. Hatfield, "through the Church. I have been told that the only real Union society in the South to-day is our Methodist Episcopal Church. We will never give up the work of planting churches in the South and West, for the hope of the nation depends on Christianity being preached from Protestant pulpits." Chaplain McCabe was then introduced. He began by saying that he believed if the nation has made a mistake of the Robert Toombs telegram. It doesn't mean much. He is the finest example of Ben. Hill's aphorism:

"'Invisible in war,
Invincible in peace.'

"Ben Hill ought to have turned to Toombs in the Senate and addressed him in that couplet. Toombs don't carry out his threats. He don't represent each while Southern people. We want to get acquainted with the South, and to establish churches there in the best way. The people of the South will never know us until we go down among them, and we don't intend to stop extending our churches there. We have 3,500 churches there and 3,500 pulpits, and we can fling out 3,500 Stars and Stripes, for we always have the flag there. The South not to have the flag and might as well get used to it. They can only do so through the Church."

During the 12 years the Church Extension Society has been in existence it has helped to build 2,750 churches, having 2,750 Sunday-schools and sittings for 600,000 people. An appeal from Chaplain McCabe resulted in the receipt of $200 in subscriptions and a handsome collection was then pronounced by the Rev. Dr. Osbon.

THE CONFERENCE IN BROOKLYN.

ITINERACY DISCUSSED—THE WOMAN'S FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETY.

The New-York East Methodist Episcopal Conference began its second day's session in the Summerfield Church, Brooklyn, at 9 o'clock yesterday morning. The attendance of members and of spectators was much larger than on the preceding day, and the church was filled. Dr. G. A. Hubbell presented a memorial from the New-Canaan Church, in Connecticut, praying for a change of the boundary line, so as to permit those churches east of the Connecticut River to unite with the Conference of Connecticut. The Conference stamped its disapproval of such a procedure by adopting a resolution instructing its delegates to the General Conference to oppose any such proposition. The Rev. G. D. Foss, of the Wesleyan University, announced that the endowment fund of the university now amounted to $500,000. The Rev. Mr. Graves read the annual report of the Brooklyn District, and the collections for missionary purposes were taken up. The following resolutions, which had been presented by the Rev. C. M. Sims, as embodying the views of himself and 25 other Methodist clergymen, were taken from the table:

Resolved, 1. That in the judgment of this Conference the time has come when some provision shall be made for extending the pastoral term beyond three years in those cases where the Bishop and his Cabinet decree such continuance best for the whole work.

2. That such provision should be made by extending the time limit, or by removing the limiting clause, or by any other plan which the wisdom of the General Conference may devise, that shall not in its judgment interfere with a true and efficient itinerary.

3. That our delegates in the approaching General Conference be requested to use their best efforts to secure such legislation as will accomplish the end.

4. That we are heartily and sincerely in favor of the itinerary, and believe that the action above indicated will not impair, but increase, its efficiency.

They provoked a lively debate which consumed all of the morning and the greater part of the afternoon session. Among those who engaged in the discussion were the Rev. C. M. Sims, the Rev. W. H. Doole, the Rev. J. L. Gilder, the Rev. George L. Thompson, the Rev. George E. Reed, and Dr. J. O. Peck, Dr. Curry, and Dr. Buckley, the Rev. John Dickinson, the Rev. S. H. Platt, and the Rev. J. B. Merwin. Amendment after amendment was offered and lost, and finally it was decided to postpone further debate until the evening session. During the afternoon session the Conference devoted an hour to listening to the ladies of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society, connected with the Conference. The Secretary, Mrs. M. F. Scranton, reported that the contributions of the society during the past year amounted to $80,000, making a total of $600,000 that had been collected since their organization. The society has sent out 43 missionaries, and now supports 140 day schools, 4 orphanages, 9 boarding-schools, 3 hospitals, 5 dispensaries, and 150 native teachers. Mrs. Scranton also reported that the Home Missionary Society had done some excellent work during the year.

Mrs. Skidmore, Secretary of the Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church of the United States, made a spirited address in which she said that the society she represented wanted just 2 cents a week from every woman in the Church in this country to aid in carrying on the work. In connection with the subject of foreign missions, the Rev. J. O. Peck said that it costs more to convert a heathen to Christ in Brooklyn than it does in India, and that there were more communicants of the Methodist Episcopal Church in India than in New-Hampshire, Vermont and Rhode Island put together.

At the evening session, the Sims resolutions were again taken up, when the Rev. Mr. Buckley offered as an amendment to them the following, which was adopted by a vote of 80 to 45.

Resolved, That in the judgment of this Conference the time has come when some provision should be made for extending the pastoral term beyond three years in those exceptional cases where emergencies require it, provided some mode can be adopted for such extension of time without interfering with the truth and efficiency of itinerancy.

The Conference then adjourned until 9 o'clock this morning.

JERSEY CITY'S FINANCES.

INVESTIGATING THE SALE OF THE SIX PER CENT. BONDS.

The investigation into the conduct of the Board of Finance of Jersey City in disposing of the 6 per cent. funding debt bonds was resumed last evening by the committee which Mayor Hopper, at the request of the Board of Finance, had appointed for that purpose. The first witness was Mr. William Haxamengo. He testified that at the request of certain members of the Board of Finance he had endeavored to find a price for the bonds. He was unable to procure the figure demanded by the board, and so reported. President Beach then urged him to make the best offer he could obtain, and soon afterward Hogensamp submitted a proposal to buy at 99 flat. The members of the board expressed their opinion that that price was very low, and the witness told them that he thought so too, but that it was the best he could procure. It was accordingly accepted. Mr. Carmellan, a member of the Investigating Committee, and an ex-Speaker of the Assembly, attempted to ascertain from Mr. Hogensamp the names of the persons that composed the syndicate, but the witness positively declined, or, as he phrased it, refrained to make any disclosures of that nature.

Finance Commissioner Mulline testified that he knew absolutely nothing about the sale of the bonds until some time after the transaction had been consummated. He had not been consulted about it, and had first learned of it accidentally. There had been no discussion of the matter in the board. Finance Commissioner Smith said the sale of the bonds had been approved in the regular caucus. The law requires that it should be done by the Board of Finance. The members of the board meeting in caucus do not constitute the Board of Finance, hence the Commissioners are anxious to make it appear that the approval was given in Committee of the Whole. They assert that during a recess the board went into Committee of the Whole. Mr. Smith qualified this statement by saying they went into caucus and that a caucus "amounted to the same thing as a Committee of the Whole."

Counselor Fleming's application to Judge Knapp for a thorough investigation of the city's financial affairs will be made on April 12. Notices of the application were served on all city officers last evening.

M'DONNELL'S RELEASE.

THE ATTENTIONS BESTOWED BY WORKING MEN UPON A PATERSON PUBLISHER.

Two months ago Judge Dixon, in the Passaic County (N. J.) Court of Oyer and Terminer, sentenced to 60 days' imprisonment Joseph P. McDonnell and Michael Manton for libel, the latter having written and the former published in the Paterson Labor Standard a communication severely criticising the treatment of the laborers in a brick-yard near Paterson. On a former occasion McDonnell was fined $500 for libeling several operatives who had refused to participate in a strike in one of the Paterson mills, and the working people subscribed the money to pay his fine. Judge Dixon remarked that the sentence in this case would be much that the defendant would have to suffer it in person. McDonnell has written regularly for his paper during his imprisonment, and has kept alive a feeling of sympathy among those whose interests he has professed to champion. His term expired yesterday morning, but he remained in jail until last evening at 7 o'clock, when, in accordance with previous announcement, an immense throng of male and female operatives from the mills assembled in front of the prison, and on his appearance, greeted him with unbounded enthusiasm. A brass band was present, and with music and attended by the crowd, he was escorted through the main street to Washington Hall, which was promptly filled. There speeches were made by Mr. O'Donnell and McDonnell, the latter giving a perfect ovation. Then the crowd repaired to another hall, where supper was served, and the festivities were kept up for some hours longer. The demonstration was one of the most remarkable ever seen in Paterson.

ENGLISH CHANNEL APPROACHES.

THE TIMES has already published the advantages of the "Trudelle system for approaching Sandy Hook," and the idea was advanced that the system of a broken-line course could probably be adapted to other ports. For the last two years Capt. L. Trudelle has been experimenting with a new system, based on the same principles as the one employed for New-York, for entering the English Channel in thick weather and anchoring, and the mouth of Havre harbor, and this plan has been submitted to the French Naval Department. The French Government, recognizing the value and safety of the invention, has allowed of the publication of this work by the Hydrographic Bureau, and has transmitted to Capt. Trudelle the warmest praise for his intellectual labor. While the approaches of New-York are dangerous, the entrances of the English Channel are even more difficult. While here there is only one coast to dread, on the other side the dangers are multiplied, and comprise the Scilly Islands, Land's End, and Cape La Hague. This new work of Capt. Trudelle begins at about 300 miles off the Scilly Islands, or 500 miles from Havre, and consists of a series of soundings. The chart is like an immense funnel, having an orifice of about 100 miles at a distance of 300 miles from land, and then gradually narrowing until the small end of the funnel emerges right opposite La Hèvre Light-house, at Havre. A careful navigator following this new system after entering the funnel-like mouth is infallibly brought to Havre, escaping the many perils which the coasts of England and France present to vessels in thick weather.

MISCELLANEOUS CITY NEWS

THE ELEVATED ROADS.

WALL-STREET MEN EXCITED OVER DAMAGING RUMORS.

Wall-street was filled yesterday with unfavorable reports about the elevated railway companies, the majority of which were alleged to have emanated from Mr. Cyrus W. Field. It was asserted that the Manhattan Company had formally notified the two leased companies of its inability to continue to pay the guaranteed dividend of 10 per cent, and had asked to have a new lease made out at 7 or 8 per cent. This, it was said, the Directors of the New-York Elevated Company had refused to agree to, and that consequently the Manhattan Company would soon cease to exist. It was further alleged that Mr. Field, having gone down to the New-York Loan and Improvement Company's office and demanded and received a list of its stockholders, discovered that the company had sold all the 65,000 shares of Manhattan stock except 18, and nearly all its Metropolitan stock. Thereupon, it was reported, he became virtually indignant and denounced the transaction as the greatest swindle of the age. Figures were produced to show that the New-York Company has been earning 17½ per cent. on its Third-avenue line and 7 per cent. on its Ninth-avenue line, and that the Metropolitan Company has earned but 4 per cent. on its Sixth-avenue line, while its Second-avenue line is being run at a loss. In this connection it was asserted that it had been determined to discontinue the running of trains on the Second-avenue route for the present. These stories, told with convincing circumstantiality of detail, knocked Manhattan down to 29½ and Metropolitan stock to 87½. At Mr. Field's office, it was stated that he had taken an early train for Irvington. Mr. José F. De Navarro, when questioned on the subject, acknowledged that the New-York Loan and Improvement Company had sold the greater portion of its Manhattan shares, but denied the remainder of the rumors in the most emphatic manner. He refused to say how many shares had been reserved, but claimed that the number was much larger than 18, besides which, the Directors all have individually the necessary number of qualifying shares. These, he said, would not be sold at any price, and he asserted that during the afternoon he had himself bought 500 shares for investment. He denounced as a lie the statement that any of the company's Metropolitan shares had been disposed of, and claimed that they are still in the company's safe, in the keeping of the Central Trust Company. In regard to the alleged breaking of the lease, he said he would regard such a proceeding as criminal and would be one of the 18 Directors to contribute $100,000 towards the expense of such a suit. As a matter of fact, he asserted, the Manhattan Company, after paying the first quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent. on the stock of both roads, had a surplus left of between $300,000 and $400,000, and will have no bonded interest to meet until July. He was asked respecting a supplementary report that had been circulated on the Street, that an unfavorable decision against the Manhattan Company, involving $100,000 damages, had been reached in the Superior Court. He answered that he did not believe it had, even if true, it was a matter of no moment, as it had been arranged between counsel on both sides to carry the question to the Court of Appeals. The company had no fear that the seven Judges of that court would allow the payment of consequential damages to be brought up, as such a thing would put a stop to every improvement in the country.

PUNISHED FOR CONTEMPT.

EDWARD G. GILMORE FINED $250 AND TO GO TO PRISON FOR THIRTY DAYS.

On Oct. 9, 1879, the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children obtained a warrant for the arrest of one Davene for using a child known as "Little Bob" in certain unlawful performances at Niblo's Garden. On the evening of the next day an officer went to the rear, or stage, entrance of Niblo's Garden during the performance, exhibited his warrant to and demanded admission of John Smith, the door-keeper, and an employe of Mr. Edward G. Gilmore, the lessee of the theatre, was called out, and who had employed the said Davene and "Little Bob" for said performances. Gilmore had been previously informed by Davene that a warrant was out for his arrest, and had referred him to his counsel, Mr. Dittenhoefer. Smith refused to admit the officer, saying that Gilmore had directed him to admit no one. A scuffle ensued, and the door was closed and locked in the face of the officer. An order to show cause why Gilmore and Smith should not be punished for contempt was obtained, and when service was attempted to be made upon Gilmore he was seized by the throat by the service that he was not Gilmore, and pointed out a bystander as being Edward G. Gilmore. The matter was referred to Mr. A. S. Hamersly to take testimony, and upon his report a motion was made before Judge Donohue to punish both defendants for a criminal contempt. The court, in granting the motion, said:

"A full and exhaustive examination of the evidence satisfies me that the parties proceeded against willfully did the acts complained of, and that they should understand that if they oppose the execution of process the heaviest penalty will follow. On the settlement of the order I will hear anything the parties may wish to say in mitigation."

The defendants were called to the bar upon the settlement of the order yesterday, and the court imposed a fine of $250 and imprisonment for 30 days upon Mr. Gilmore, this being the full punishment allow by law, and a fine of $250 upon Smith, who acted under his employer's orders. Ex-Judge Dittenhoefer, counsel for defendants, will appeal.

THE COUNT DE LESSEPS.

HE SAILS FOR EUROPE WITH HIS FAMILY IN THE ADRIATIC.

The Count Ferdinand de Lesseps, the Countess, and their children, sailed for Europe yesterday morning in the White Star steam-ship Adriatic, accompanied by several members of the great canal projector's engineering party. The three children of the distinguished couple were transferred, with their governess and maid, from the Windsor Hotel to the steamer, an hour before the time of sailing. MM. Bionne, Couvreur, Dauprat, and Gallay were also on board early. It was 9:40 A. M. when a carriage containing the Count, the Countess, Mr. Cyrus W. Field and Mr. Paul Lefferts drove down the passenger gangway. The Countess, looking pale and somewhat fatigued, was escorted to her state-room by Mr. Field, her husband remaining for a few moments on deck to shake hands with several gentlemen who were waiting to see the party start on their journey homeward. Among them were M. Edmund Breul, the French Consul-General; Mr. Nathan Appleton, M. Meunier, the French journalist; Mr. Ferro, Messrs. Bogart, Chanut, and Dresser, of the Society of Civil Engineers; Mr. Bischoff, Mr. and Mrs. Tangeriel, Mr. Yall, of Hoboken, and Mr. Walt. On arriving in Liverpool the Count will accept the courtesies of the London and North Western Railway in the journey to London. Having explained his object in a few of the principal English cities, he will hasten to Paris to the purpose of organizing his canal company. Among the other saloon passengers on the Adriatic are Dr. S. G. Vanderpool, Mrs. Vanderpool, Miss Vanderpool, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Stern, Mrs. George Sheppard, Mr. W. A. Tomlinson, Mr. George Parsons, Mr. W. A. Sartorris, Capt. Thomas H. Ouilen, of Company B, Twenty-second Regiment, and Mr. W. F. Foster. The tables of the main saloon were literally covered with floral mementoes from the friends of Capt. Ouilen, Mr. and Mrs. Stern, and Mr. Foster, the latter gentleman's testimonials being especially noticeable. Capt. Ouilen's command assembled on the deck, wearing their fatigue caps, to give him a parting cheer.

SPECIAL RATES TO BE DISCUSSED.

The Board of Managers of the Produce Exchange, at their meeting yesterday, discussed the advisability of reopening the dispute for and against the Hepburn Anti-discrimination bill. Some of the members, including the President, were in favor of taking no action, on the ground that those in favor of the bill should have some forward and expressed themselves when the opportunity was afforded them. On the other side, it was argued that the meeting alluded to was held in an unusual portion of the Exchange and at an inconvenient hour, and that the majority of the members disapprove of the resolutions there adopted. Finally, as a compromise, it was agreed that nothing should be said about the Hepburn bills, and the following resolution was adopted and will be submitted to a ballot on Saturday next:

Resolved, That the New-York Produce Exchange is earnestly opposed to any discrimination in freight rates of whatsoever nature against the mechanis of New-York.

The railroad men say they will all vote cheerfully for this resolution. The anti-special raters, on the other hand, are indignant, claiming that it was purposely framed not to meet the case at issue.

A BIRTH WHICH CAUSED MISCHIEF.

Pietro Lombardi, an Italian, of No. 315 Mott-street, was arraigned before Justice Ottenberg, in the Jefferson Market Police Court, yesterday, charged with cruel ill-treatment of his wife, Francesca Periavella Lombardi. The prisoner came to this country about five years ago, leaving his wife in Italy. She arrived here two months ago, and lived with him since at No. 315 Mott-street. Yesterday, much to his astonishment, his wife gave birth to a fine boy. Lombardi, becoming enraged at this evidence of his wife's infidelity, beat her cruelly and drove her from the house. The unfortunate woman took refuge with the new-born babe in an unoccupied garret at No. 308 Mott-street. There she was found by Patrolman Dunn, of the Fifteenth Precinct, who had the suffering woman removed to the New-York Hospital. Pietro's treatment has endangered the woman's life, and he was committed to prison to await the result.

A FARMER IN THE HANDS OF SHARPERS.

James E. McKeown, a farmer of Fairmount, Westchester County, accompanied by a farm hand, went to the Bull's Head, on Third-avenue and Twenty-fourth-street, on Wednesday morning, to purchase a pair of horses. They were met by Michael Roche, who took them to a stable in the Bowery to inspect a pair. McKeown agreed to take the animals on trial, leaving a deposit of $25. His farm hand mounted one of them, and was about to take them away, when Thomas Kerrigan, who is said to be Roche's partner, appeared, claimed the horses as his property, and dragged the farm hand to the ground. Roche meanwhile had disappeared. The farmer was unable to secure his deposit money, a wrangle was the consequence, and the men were both locked up in the Mercer-Street Police Station. In the Jefferson Market Police Court, yesterday, Kerrigan gave McKeown his money, and the latter refused to make a complaint. Justice Ottenbourg fined them both $10 for disorderly conduct.

IS IT A MAN'S NEST?

THE WAY SOME THINGS ARE DONE BY SHERMAN'S CUSTOM-HOUSE MEN.

Two days ago the announcement was made of the arrest of Charles Mechellier, diamond dealer, of No. 4 Maiden-lane, and Ernest Sachs and Jean Baptiste Bebiant, on a charge made by Special Agent Nevins that they were implicated in the smuggling of a large quantity of diamonds. Sachs and Bebiant arrived from Paris, by the steam-ship Main, on March 26, and the same vessel brought out a consignment of 75,100 francs worth of diamonds from Emile Vonderheym, of Paris. The diamonds were invoiced, the duties were paid after appraisal at the Custom-house, and they were taken to Mechellier's store and locked up in the safe on Monday. Sachs and Bebiant, also, being employes of Vonderheym, went to and were much about Mechellier's store. On Tuesday the arrests were made and the store seized, and a Government keeper put in possession, the defendants being released on heavy bail. At the time of the arrests and seizure, Mechellier and a gentleman named Charles Gagnebin were in the store, and they shut their safe and prevented Mr. Nevins from looking into it or taking out the diamonds it contained. On Wednesday Mr. Nevins made another sworn charge against Mechellier and Gagnebin, to the effect that they had resisted him while he was in the discharge of his duty, and rescued from him property under seizure. They were arrested on this charge, but were released on their own recognizance by Commissioner Shields. Before making the affidavit on which this arrest was made Mr. Special Agent Nevins made an effort to get some one else to do that piece of swearing, but the party refused to accommodate him, and he then did it himself. On the same afternoon Mr. Nevins went to the store, opened the safe, and counted and weighed and appraised the value of the entire stock of diamonds, rubies, sapphires, and cat's-eyes, and made memoranda of it to be publicly shown in court.

Yesterday Mechellier, Sachs, and Bebiant were arraigned for examination, the complaint against Mechellier and Gagnebin being first adjourned to Monday next. Assistant United States Attorney Tenney appeared to prosecute and Mr. Hartley to defend the prisoners. Mr. Tenney began by asking to dismiss the charge as against Mechellier on the warrant for smuggling, and it was granted. The examination on the complaint against Sachs and Bebiant was then continued for two hours. The only showing that was made was that when the Government officers examined the stores which had been established in Mechellier's rooms, they found some about 120,000 francs worth of diamonds over and above the invoice brought by the steamer Main on Friday last. An appraiser, Mr. Stevens, examined every package, counted the stones, weighed them, and found some of the packages were in the same condition as when they passed through his hands on Saturday; some of the contents of packages had been mingled with other packages, but, as he admitted, it was impossible to say that any one of the stones belonged either to one package or the other, nor could he tell those stones that came over in the last consignment, except by the fact that on weighing a given number of the stones seized they weighed and measured to correspond with a given package sent on the invoice. A little girl who lives in Mechellier's house was subpoenaed as a witness for the Government, in the belief, probably, that, taken by surprise, she might make some grand disclosure as to Sachs's and Bebiant's visits on Saturday and Monday at Mechellier's residence. She knew nothing of the matter, however, and the Commissioner smiled and seemed to wonder what she had been called for. Mechellier was next put on the stand by the Government, and after long examination in the nature of cross-examination, it was learned from him that he is Vonderheym's agent, and that he has received many invoices of diamonds, and sells them as fast as he can, making returns of sales to his principal once or twice a month by duplicate letters. But he never keeps any regular books of account, because he is on salary, and a diamond stock can nearly always be carried in a coat pocket or wallet. For his own guidance, he kept a memorandum of dealings in a note-book, and when he had reported to his principal, he generally threw away the note-books if they were full and no more entries could be made in them. If he was sent on commission, he said, he would keep books perhaps, but as he was salaried, he did not have to compute his own commissions. Sachs was an agent of Vonderheym, who came over here occasionally to look after the business, and when he was in New-York he took sole charge.

This morning Mechellier's counsel sought to proof of smuggling that was made in the case yesterday. The examination will be resumed to-day.

THE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

A MEETING IN WHICH A DIFFERENCE OF OPINION WAS MANIFESTED.

Yesterday's meeting of the Chamber of Commerce was an extraordinary one, inasmuch as the unanimity with which the recommendations of the dignified Executive Committee are usually received was boldly departed from, and, after a warm discussion, the opposite course was approved by a large majority. The question was in regard to the adoption of a series of resolutions denouncing the West-street Improvement bill, now before the Legislature, as a piece of special legislation calculated to anticipate the decision of the Court of Appeals. Certain individuals have claimed that their possessed rights in portions of the wharf property were being infringed by the new system of docks along the water-front, and they brought suit against the City. It was asserted yesterday that three different judgments had been obtained adverse to their pretensions, but that recently a fourth suit had been decided in their favor. This decision has been appealed, and the case is now pending in the Court of Appeals. Last year the claimants got a bill through both houses of the Legislature establishing their claims, but Gov. Robinson vetoed it. The pending bill is said to be the same one. Messrs. Thurber, Smith, Conkling, Wahrous, and Schwab argued in favor of the resolutions, holding that the matter should be left to the courts. It appears that the subject came before the Executive Committee some time ago on a letter from Controller Kelly, in which he asked the aid of the Chamber to defeat the bill, setting forth his reasons at great length, and the committee then agreed not to meddle in the controversy. Yesterday, Messrs. Brown, Law, and Ruggles, of the committee, and Mr. Sarmanian defended their action with warmth. Mr. Low made a motion to lay the resolutions on the table. This was promptly voted down, as was also a subsequent motion by Mr. Buggles to refer the resolutions to the Committee on Harbor and Shipping. They were then adopted, two-thirds of those present voting in the affirmative.

Previous to this, Col. Conkling took the Executive Committee to task for their seeming tardiness in replying to the letter of Secretary Evarts suggesting the establishment of a museum of samples of exportable goods, which was referred to them at the last meeting. He said the matter was of the highest importance, and demanded immediate action, and in the course of a 35 years' membership he did not remember that another such compliment had been paid to the Chamber. The Chair responded that the committee proposed to report at the next meeting. Mr. Phillips suggested that a special meeting should be called on the subject as soon as the Committee should be ready to report. He was informed that it was in the discretion of the committee to call such a meeting.

A resolution was adopted favoring the passage of Assembly bill No. 336, now before the Legislature, amending the act for the protection of seamen in the port and harbor of New-York. Messrs. James Talcott, Gustav Schwab, and Henry M. Taber were appointed a special committee to nominate officers of the Chamber for the ensuing year. Messrs. George A. Jarvis and James W. Elwell were appointed a special committee to audit the retiring Treasurer's accounts. Messrs. Oliver Harriman, Samuel Maclean, Charles Watrous, Charles H. Marshall, and George Wilson were appointed a special committee to make arrangements for the one hundred and twelfth anniversary banquet of the Chamber on May 11. Among the new members elected were Clinton B. Fisk and Howard Potter.

WALL-STREET'S NEW BANK BUILDING.

The new joint building of the First National Bank and the Bank of the Republic is to have a frontage on Wall-street of 92 feet and a depth on Broadway of 70 feet. It will be 130 feet in height from the basement to the roof, and will contain eight stories, exclusive of the basement. The first story and basement will be of stone, and the remainder of brick, with stone cappings. The main entrance will be on Wall-street. The first floor will be divided into two main rooms, each 32 feet by 70. The one on the corner will be occupied by the First National Bank, and the other by the Bank of the Republic. Both will be fitted with immense fire and burglar proof vaults, and both will be provided with spacious Directors' rooms, cloak-rooms, closets, and lavatories. Two elevators will extend to the seven upper floors, which will be divided into eight offices each, with ante-rooms. The entire building will be fire-proof, and will cost in the neighborhood of $600,000. The work of tearing down the present buildings will begin on May 1.

A GRANT CAMPAIGN CLUB.

At the meeting of the Nineteenth Assembly District Republican Association last evening, President Charles S. Bruder in the chair, 30 new members were elected and 15 were proposed for membership. After the adjournment of the association, the Grant Campaign Club formed last month, perfected its organization by electing for permanent officers: Prof. J. L. Hunt as President, Messrs. William H. Bellammy and R. H. Green as Vice-Presidents, Mr. Charles S. Bruder as Treasurer, and Mr. W. G. Owen as Secretary. Prof. Hunt made a speech, in which he suggested that the club should not confine its meetings to the head-quarters on the Boulevard, but that it should hold them at different places in the district between Fifty-second-street and Spuyten Duyvil Creek, which were the northern and southern boundaries of the territory it embraced.
